LE BLANC GIRL TO TESTIFY

Lawyers for the four brothers of Clarence F. Glover, who are trying to break the will of the Waltham laundryman, who was shot and killed in his laundry in Waltham a year ago last November and whose slayer has never been punished, to-day won the right to take the deposition of Hattie Le Blanc, the young domestic who formerly worked in the Glover home and who was tried for and acquitted of the murder of Glover.

The right to question Hattie Le Blanc was given to-day by Judge Hammond in the Supreme Court. It became known at the hearing before him that Hattie had left her home in West Arichat and was now in St. John, N. B.

Edward P. Barry and Samuel D. Elmore, lawyers, the latter executor for the Glover estate, will leave Boston to-night for St. John to question Hattie. They will spend all day to-morrow and the next in so doing, leave there Saturday and be back in time for the opening of the will trial in East Cambridge Monday.

Decision Due To-morrow.

The hearing before Judge Hammond was held on the motion of Elmore to dispense with a jury at the trial which starts Monday. Fletcher D. Ranney, who appears for Elmore because he cannot appear as lawyer and witness both, urged the granting of the motion to-day. Jesse Gove, attorney for the four brothers, opposed the motion.

Judge Hammond took the motion under advisement and will announce his decision to-morrow.

Mr. Ranney to-day declared that so much publicity had been given the previous will trial and the murder trial that it was impossible to obtain an unprejudiced jury. He said:

"The two cases were widely exploited and with glaring headlines the newspapers forced the two cases into the public minds. Hattie Le Blanc was made a heroine in the murder trial. The antipathy aroused against Mrs. Glover was so great that when she left the court room she was almost friendless.

"The public mind was filled with the probable guilt of Mrs. Glover, and after the trial was over the newspapers continued to demand an investigation by the Attorney General or the indictment of Mrs. Glover.

Says Public Is Prejudiced.

"These stories in the papers have so prejudiced the public mind that any intelligent juror is sure to come into the case with a preconceived idea of Mrs. Glover's guilt. The minds of everybody are full of suspicion and prejudice and we feel that on this account a trial before an unprejudiced judicial mind would be more just and that it would save the county great expense, as the trial will probably last for weeks."

"I do not think it is fair to say that it is impossible to get an unprejudiced jury," said Mr. Gove. "It seems to us that it is highly possible, and we urge that the motion now before the court be denied."

Mr. Gove then said that he had learned that Hattie Le Blanc had left her home in West Arichat and that she was now in St. John. "We ask your Honor," said he, "to give us the right to take her deposition there as you have given us the right to take it in West Arichat."

Mr. Ranney stated that it seemed strange to him that she should have left her home just before this trial started. Mr. Gove denied that there was anything strange about it.

"Your Honor, well knows," said he, "that we tried to get her to come here and testify and that accounts for her presence in St. John."

Judge Hammond then gave permission for the taking of the deposition at St. John. He told the lawyers to arrange the details among themselves.

It is expected that the trial will reveal new secrets in the Glover household and there are persons who wonder whether any of its developments will tend to answer the enigma—"Who shot Glover?"

Glover left the bulk of an estate valued at about $50,000 to his widow, Mrs. Lillian F. Glover, for life, and the balance to go to his brother, Seymour Glover and the latter's wife. His four other brothers want the Supreme Court to break the will, which was allowed by Judge McIntire in the Middlesex County Probate Court.

They succeeded in getting the Supreme Court to grant a new trial on the allowance of the will. The instrument was drawn up shortly before Glover's murder.

The ruling which grants this new court consideration of the case provides for a hearing before a judge and jury.

After Hattie Le Blanc's acquittal, Attorney-General Swift took up the case to see if any evidence pointing towards the slayer could be found. But on February last he said that nothing had been discovered to warrant bringing action against any person or persons.

Brookline Society Girl Bride To-day

MRS. MATTHEW FOX

SOCIETY AT BIG WEDDING

Matthew J. Fox, son of John Fox of Ashmont, was married at 9:30 o'clock to-day to Miss Mary G. Fitzpatrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Fitzpatrick of Garden road, Brookline. The ceremony was performed in St. Mary's Church of the Assumption. Rev. M. T. McManus, pastor of the church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Joseph Murphy of Whitman. Fr. McManus also celebrated the nuptial mass.

Mr. Fox is a director in the firm of the William Filene Sons Company. Miss Fitzpatrick is prominent socially in Brookline. Her father is president of the house of Brown, Durrell & Co. Only relatives were invited to the wedding.

The church was beautifully decorated for the ceremony. Special solos were sung by Signor Cappeloni and Signor Gonopola, former soloists at the Sistine Chapel of St. Peter's.

The bride's gown was of white chiffon made over white satin trimmed with rose point lace and with a broad Watteau court train. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss Elizabeth Fitzpatrick, her sister, was maid of honor. She wore nile green charmeuse with an overdress of chiffon of the same shade. Her gown was trimmed with Venetian point lace, en train renaissance.

INSURGENT SPEAKS ON THE INITIATIVE

WASHINGTON, April 20. — Senator Works, the new insurgent Senator from California, occupied the centre of the stage in the Senate to-day with an address on the initiative, referendum and recall. The Californian had previously given notice of his intention to speak upon this subject, and in consequence all of the progressives of both parties were in attendance to hear him. The regulars looked upon the appearance of the newcomer in the arena of debate with feelings of resentment.

BURGLAR SLAIN AFTER CHASE

LAWRENCE, April 20.—A burglar, caught in an attempt to rob the house of Charles Newton in West Andover, was shot and killed early to-day after a chase of more than a mile. The burglar was shot by Newton, who is a special officer in the town of Andover.

Newton was awakened by his wife at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Newton heard a noise in the cellar of their home. A moment later she saw the face of a man at their bedroom window. The man outside tried to raise the window. By this time her husband was awake.

Newton grabbed some clothes and started after the burglar. Before he was off the farm Newton caught sight of him. He called on him to stop. Newton had taken his revolver. In the next half mile of the pursuit he fired three times in the air, calling on the burglar to stop each time.

Finally they reached Fish Brook, near the Lawrence Canoe Club building. The pursued jumped over a wall. He hid on the other side. When Newton got to the wall the burglar jumped from behind and attacked Newton. The officer fired once more. This time he fired to kill. The burglar fell dead.

The body was taken to Andover. An autopsy will be performed to-day. The police are working to identify the man.

DEBATE ON MEXICO IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, April 20.—An important conference on the Mexican situation was called this afternoon at the White House. Those summoned to participate were Secretary Knox, Representative Sulzer, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, and Representatives Garner, Sharpe and Foster, members of a sub-committee.

Before the conference Representative Sulzer said that his committee is practically unanimous against Mexican intervention. Before any move at all is taken, he said, there will be deep deliberation. An effort to invade Mexico would mean the strengthening of the United States army to probably three times its present size, he asserted. Mr. Sulzer quoted military experts to show that a force of 250,000 men would be necessary for offensive operations and that it might take years to bring a successful campaign to a conclusion.

Statement by Ambassador.

Senator Culberson of Texas offered in the Senate a resolution that intervention on the part of the United States in the trouble in Mexico would be without justification and contrary to the policy of this government of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries; that the extent to which the United States should go in the present emergency in Mexico is to enforce the neutrality laws with vigor and fully protect the lives and property of Americans and that the rights of Americans residing in Mexico are those of neutrals.

Mexican Ambassador Zamacona gave out the following statement to-day:

"The note addressed by the Department of Foreign Affairs to Ambassador Wilson refers to the lamentable events on the border. It certainly must be friendly in form and essence, for it is impossible to suppose for a moment that it might be in the least unfriendly or discourteous.

"The relations between the two governments have been most cordial.

"The press at the present, more than ever, may do great good if it directs its efforts to prevent public opinion from being unduly excited and misled. This would be a great help toward accomplishing the earnest wishes of the Mexican people and their government to preserve the friendly relations existing between both countries."

"A Diplomatic Move."

That President Diaz disclaims responsibility for death of Americans at Douglas during the battle of Agua Prieta and that the Mexican government repudiates all liabilities for injury to American citizens across the American line, and that this will be embodied in the reply of the Mexican government to President Taft's demands for assurances that there shall be no further danger to American citizens, was acknowledged by President Taft at the White House to-day, in a conversation with Representative Slayden of Texas, who represents the San Antonio district.

After a long conference with Mr. Taft this was announced by Representative Slayden as he left the White House. This, however, President Taft believes is only a diplomatic move on the part of the Mexican government to retain the favor of the Mexican masses and to "save its face."

GIRL IS BEATEN BY A DORCHESTER THUG

Mary C. McDonald, employed by a family living at No. 18 Windemere road, Dorchester, is to-day recovering from the effects of a severe beating by a highwayman who held her up in a lonely section of Windemere road last night, and after throwing her to the ground almost choked her into insensibility in an attempt to rob her. Two strangers in Stoughton street nearby heard her call for help and went to her assistance, frightening off her assailant before he could rob her. The man made his escape.

SALE OF TOO FROTHY BEER JAILS SIX MEN

MUNICH, April 20.—Short measure in beer by filling steins and seidels with froth so as to form a "collar" has been judged an offence punishable by imprisonment by the criminal court here. The tenant of a beer house was sentenced to six weeks in jail and fined $750, and five of his waiters got from one to three weeks in jail. The froth greatly increased profits but the public protested to such an extent that a virtual "beer strike" was brought about.

54-HOUR LAW BILL GOES TO THE HOUSE

Without debate, the Senate to-day passed to be engrossed the bill to prohibit the employment of women and minors in mercantile and manufacturing establishments for more than fifty-four hours a week. The bill now goes to the House.

MAX RUBIN, WHO ENDED HIS LIFE WHILE DISCOURAGED

MAX RUBIN

GIVES UP HOPE, ENDS HIS LIFE

Despondent because he had been unable to better his condition in life, Max Rubin, twenty-three, shot himself through the head early to-day at his home, No. 8 Walnut street, Chelsea, and died almost instantly. The suicide was pathetic. The young man had done his best to educate himself, but his lack of progress preyed upon his mind until he decided to end it all. He left a note to his parents in Russia, explaining why he could no longer live.

Rubin's great ambition was to become a civil engineer and he was enrolled for that purpose at the school of the Civic Service House in Salem street. It is now vacation time at this school and this delay in the progress of his studies increased Rubin's melancholy.

He earned little at his trade, and he often lamented the fact that in this country, of which he had expected so much, there was no way known to him of gaining admission to a college where he could quickly come to the goal of his desires.

His home was in Warsaw, Russia, and he was a bookbinder by trade. He left home some time ago and went to Paris. By careful application and study he mastered the French language, but his lot did not improve and he decided to seek new fields. About a year ago he came to Chelsea and took lodgings with Samuel Fass in the house in Walnut street.

Hopeless Over Future.

He bought grammars, arithmetics, geographies and books of art and science and did his best to learn English and the ways of America. He advanced in his studies but his condition in life did not improve and he grew despondent. He often spoke to others in the house of the hopelessness and the poor outlook for the future.

After the family had eaten supper last evening Rubin asked Fass to go out with him as he had something he wanted to say. Fass asked him what it was and Rubin said, "I don't want to tell you before your wife. Come outside."

Fass refused to go out with him and Rubin left the house. He returned about 11 o'clock and members of the Fass family noticed that he was pale and very nervous. He said nothing, but went to his room on the first floor, off the kitchen.

Left Note to Parents.

A little more than an hour later Fass was awakened by a shot. He hurried to Rubin's door and found it locked. Light was streaming through a crack under the door and Fass asked to be admitted. There was no answer and Fass notified the police. Sergeant Hebblethwaite and two patrolmen forced the door and found Rubin dead on the floor, with a revolver at his side. Medical Examiner McGrath was notified and from his examination found that Rubin was standing sideways at the door when he shot himself. The bullet entered the right side of the head and passed through the top of the skull. It struck over the top of the door and bounced back on to a couch seven feet away.

The letter he left asked that a sister, Mrs. Clara Starr of No. 17 Essex street, New York, be notified. Word was sent to her by wire and she called up over the long distance telephone to say that she was starting for Boston to claim the body of her brother.

This letter was said by all who saw it to be a model of English style, although the youth had been in this country only a short time. It told his distress at being compelled to live an ignorant life and his discouragement at the impossibility of achieving the results he had anticipated. There was a pathetic appeal for the forgiveness of his parents and his brother and sister in Russia, and it ended with the request that $50 which would be found in his trunk be sent to them.

The body was taken to the North Grove Street Morgue, and will probably be sent back to Russia for burial.

HOUSE MAKES MERRY AT LAW ON AEROPLANES

"I call your attention to the necessity of providing for the regulation of aeroplanes."

Governor Foss took away the breath of the Legislature to-day by sending in the above message. It came out of a clear sky during the debate in the House on ratifying the Income Tax amendment.

WELL-WE MUST EXPECT THIS KIND OF WEATHER THIS TIME OF YEAR
THURSDAY-RAIN

The message relative to aeroplanes was read amid considerable surprised merriment on the part of members, and at the conclusion of the reading Representative White of Brookline moved that inasmuch as it related to the safety of persons and to transportation as well, it be referred to the Committees on Public Health and Railroads, sitting jointly. Mr. Cox as an amendment offered a substitute motion that it be referred to the Committee on Mercantile Affairs, but this motion was defeated.

A Parliamentary Tangle.

Mr. White's motion was then adopted on a voice vote, and Speaker Walker immediately moved to reconsider. His motion prevailed, and he then offered a substitute to Mr. White's motion that the matter be referred to the Committee on Roads and Bridges. While the Acting Speaker, Underhill of Somerville, and the clerk were straightening out the parliamentary tangle into which the House had precipitated itself, White and Walker held a conference in front of the Speaker's desk.

Doyle of New Bedford suggested that the message should be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, "because that committee has been up in the air most of the time during the present session."

Washburn of Worcester begged that there be no reference to a joint committee, because he believed the matter can be handled much better by a single committee. He also observed that in view of the fact that White's attention has been repeatedly called to the desirability of treating others courteously, he would have expected him to consult the chairman of the Committee on Railroads before including that committee in the reference he suggested.

The Voice From Brookline.

Mr. White replied that he cared little whether the Committee on Railroads was included or not, but as the Governor's message has particular reference to the prevention of injury to persons he believed it should go to the Committee on Public Health, and he asked leave to amend his motion to read that the matter should go to that committee alone.

Speaker Walker remarked that there appeared to be no specially appropriate committee to which the matter should be referred, and so long as the reference was to

KELLY IS HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Former Councilman Coleman Kelly was arraigned before Judge Fallon in the South Boston court at 9:40 to-day on the charge of killing Jeremiah Mahoney after a quarrel that followed the wedding celebration of Patrick Manning of No. 93 C street early yesterday. Within five minutes he was held without bail for a hearing Saturday.

Kelly's aged mother was in the court room with her two other sons almost up to the time of the former Councilman's arraignment, but his attorney, ex-State Senator Michael J. Creed, led her gently from the court just before the young man was brought into the pen. She was dressed entirely in black, and her reddened eyelids betokened weeping and a sleepless night, but she walked firmly out on the arm of one of her sons, trying to bear her burden of grief without flinching.

It was not until after the morning grist of petty cases had been disposed of that the dock was cleared and Kelly was led from the cell room by Court Officer Drohan. As the lock clicked behind him the young man, who had entered the dock with his back to the crowd in the court room, sank down as if in absolute weariness on the bench within.

Betrays His Suffering.

In a moment he half turned his head and stole a glance at the spectators. There was a searching eagerness in his eyes, as if his glance hunted some face that had in it sympathy and love for him. But it was only the glance of a second and then he turned again and gazed at the wall.

In his eyes too, there was the haggard and worried look that spoke of suffering, his shoulders were stooped and his hair was ruffled. When his counsel stepped over to the low rail that divides the dock from the judge's bench and spoke to him a single committee he cared not at all which committee considers it.

FOSS MESSAGE ON AEROPLANES

White's motion, as amended, was then adopted, and the message will be considered by the Committee on Public Health.

The aeroplane message follows:

April 20, 1911.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives:

"I call to your attention the necessity of providing for the regulation of aeroplanes.

"These machines are now being manufactured in such numbers that the present year will probably witness a greatly increased use of them. They already present a serious menace to life, and their increasing use will occasion a much more serious danger to the public.

"They should, I believe, be restricted, so far as law can accomplish such result, to certain limited and specified routes and practice grounds.

Follows Governor Baldwin.

Governor Baldwin of Connecticut has kindly sent me the draft of a bill recently introduced into the Legislature of that State, and I transmit it herewith for your consideration.

In connection with this subject I desire to say that it appears to me that great advantage would result if all legislation of this sort is enacted in co-operation with the Legislatures of other New England States.

For lack of such co-operation, Massachusetts and the other New England States have in the past enacted laws regulating transportation which are widely at variance. Much confusion and waste result from such lack of method, and our New England States thus lose the value which a sort of confederation in our legislative methods would bring about.

I urge you to consult with the governing bodies of other New England States and endeavor to formulate laws for the regulation of transportation by air craft which will be fairly uniform.

(Signed) EUGENE N. FOSS.

Two other messages accompanied the message on aeroplanes. One recommends that the Governor be empowered to appoint a commissioner to visit Panama Exposition site and arrange for a Massachusetts exhibit. The third recommends legislation to prohibit the barring of sailors in United States uniform from dance halls, restaurants, etc., "if you find that there is any such discrimination within this State."

WALKER TALKS ON INCOME TAX

The House of Representatives to-day almost unanimously voted to reconsider its vote of last Monday whereby it voted in favor of a resolution favoring the proposed income tax amendment to the national constitution.

Speaker Walker to-day at the convening of the House took the floor and spoke in favor of his motion that the House reconsider its income tax vote. Representatives Flower of Greenfield, Dean of Wakefield and Pope of Leominster, the only Democrat who voted against the tax last week, also spoke in favor of reconsidering the vote in order that there might be a free discussion of the question.

Representative John W. Haigis of Montague opposed reconsideration. The House finally by an almost unanimous voice vote decided to reconsider. Speaker Walker then began his speech attacking the proposed income tax amendment.

Speaker Walker said:

"Mr. Speaker: It may be that there exists an overwhelming public sentiment in Massachusetts in favor of the national income tax. It may be that that sentiment will to-day be reflected in the vote of this House. I realize that, by this time, the mind of every man in the House may be made up and that it may be futile for me to argue this case in the hope of changing votes. Yet I feel that this question is of such transcendent importance, not alone to Massachusetts, but to the whole people of the United States that it is my clear duty to express to you the principal reasons why this resolution ought not to pass.

"In the first place I wish to state with all the energy of which I am capable that this is not a question of income tax or no income tax. It is rather a question of surendering once and for all to the nation the independence of the States and thus upsetting the balance of the Constitution. For a State can never be independent which has no independent source of revenue.

"To-day, under the Constitution, all direct taxation is practically left to the States. If this resolution passes then in fact the States will no longer have any independent sources of revenue. If it be said that the nation would still be unable to tax real estate and personal property then I reply that it would have power to tax the income of real estate and personal property and so would have power to absorb so much of such income for national purposes as it sees fit.

State vs. Nation.

"This is, therefore, a proposition to put all the present sources of revenue of the State at the mercy of the national government. To-day the States derive a much needed revenue from the tax on inheritances. At any moment, however, the nation may weaken this source of State revenue by laying a national inheritance tax, for this is a source of revenue not protected by the constitution. Are we prepared to say that the States should have no sources of revenue which cannot be absorbed by the nation? Is it of no importance to save direct taxation for State and local needs? The State within their sphere should be independent and to this end should have independent sources of revenue. The fundamental and most practical objection, therefore, to the national income tax is that it seriously infringes upon the sources from which the States must draw their revenue. If the nation is permitted to lay an income tax then sooner or later there is sure to be conflict between the States and the nation over the subject of taxation.

"The States and their cities and towns must have more revenue for State and local needs. What is the financial situation in this Commonwealth? The revenue of the State is to-day running behind its expenditure at the rate of five and a half million dollars a year, thus necessitating a State tax on cities and towns. This is not the whole story, because, even with the State tax, the Commonwealth has been running in debt for more than fifteen years at the rate of over a million dollars a year. The time has come when this State must raise more revenue. Cities and towns also are burdened, as we all know, by high tax rates and by increasing debts. Every dollar which the Commonwealth can raise by direct taxation is absolutely needed at home.

"Nation Does Not Need Tax."

"The nation, on the other hand, does not need this tax. It has ample sources of revenue independent of the States. The nation will never give up indirect taxation. It will simply add the income tax to its indirect taxes. The nation to-day pays for all its public buildings, harbor improvements and other permanent improvements out of its revenue. A slight change of tariff rates and excise taxes has frequently resulted in surplus revenues so large as to lead to extravagance and to financial embarassment. The tax laws of the national government often have been revised for the sole purpose of reducing its income, and so of reducing a surplus dangerously large.

"Now what is the real reason for this movement for a national income tax? It lies, not in the need for more national revenue, but rather in the determination of the people to reach the incomes of the rich and subject them to taxation in proportion to their ability to pay. I entirely sympathize with this determination. The time has come to pass the most stringent kind of laws to prevent tax dodging. The time has come to pass a real progressive income tax. But it is fatal to the independence and to the real interests of the States to turn this source of revenue over to the nation.

"The money to be derived from income taxes should be applied to schools, libraries, playgrounds, parks, hospitals and asylums, to streets and sewers, to police and fire protection, to the care of the public health and safety, to the thousand and one local needs rather than to the army, the navy and the other great national needs, for which the nation to-day has ample revenue. I stand, therefore, for a State and not for a national income tax, and I believe we can lay an effective State income tax if we set about it.

"Mr. Speaker, if we are to have independent sources of State revenue and so preserve the independence of the States, if we are to prevent conflict between the States and the nation over the question of taxation, if we are to preserve the balance of the Constitution, if we are still to have a federal system of government under which the States and the nation are to be independent and sovereign each within its sphere, then we must vote against this resolution."

OPPORTUNITY WEEK NEAR

By The CONTEST EDITOR.

"O!"

"O, what?"

"I got you," says some candidate, "you mean 'O' for 'Opportunity.' You sprung that before. You're repeating. This contest is getting too much for the Contest Editor."

Guess again. You're wrong. The contest is not getting too much for the Contest Editor—not yet, but—well, never mind that. That "O" does stand for "Opportunity." But it also stands for another word.

"O" stands for "Only." And there you are.

"Only" what?

Only two days more left before Opportunity Week begins. Yes Sir! Opportunity Week begins Sunday. Only Friday and Saturday intervene. That isn't much of an intervention, not half so much of a one as we may have down in Mexico.

But we are not down in Mexico, praise be—we are in New England and we are in a great $35,000 Prize Contest, with Opportunity Week "right up forninst us," as they say.

Opportunity Week.

Where are you going to wake up next Sunday morning? The Contest Editor hopes that all his candidate friends will wake up at home where they belong. But they are all going to wake up in Opportunity Week at the same time.

Next Sunday, April 23, brings the golden time when, for one week, all subscriptions will count double. Remember, this is for one week only. It isn't for two weeks or three weeks or even for a week and a half. It's for one week—"o-n-e," ONE. This Opportunity Week will come to a sharp and sudden stop on the following Saturday night, April 29, at 10 p. m. by the Contest Editor's dollar watch.

Hark! The Contest Editor hears "a voice from a candidate away down toward the end of the list, saying:

"What's the use? I'm so far behind that I can never catch up."

Advice for Candidates.

Now, listen, Mr. Coldfeeto. This Opportunity Week is just for such candidates as you. The double count will enable you, if you do any kind of work, to climb up and up in the list of standing. The reason you are behind now is because you haven't half-worked your territory. Why, the chances are you haven't even tickled it, to say nothing of stirring it up in good, lively fashion.

Now, get ready! Start out Sunday with this Opportunity Week in one hand and a bunch of subscription blanks in the other and bring home subscriptions for that double count. By the way, if you need subscription blanks, send for more. The Contest Editor has plenty of them.

Up in the busy Merrimac Valley, in the city of Lawrence, is a hustling police inspector. He is Inspector James W. Cadogan. He is a District 3 candidate. He belongs to Division 8, A. O. H., and to the Massachusetts Police Association. Followers of athletics will recall him as "Jimmy" Cadogan, the sprinter and baseball player. He is a mighty popular citizen around his home territory, too.

Says Cadogan: "I'm sprinting after that capital prize, and I'm going to take it into custody for myself."

MAN IS KILLED BY LIVE WIRE

Rocco Bernavo was killed instantly to-day in Puritan avenue, Swampscott, when 2,300 volts of electricity from a broken electric light wire passed through his body.

Bernavo and a companion, employed by Michael McDonough, a contractor, were on their way to work. Bernavo saw the wire, which had been blown down by the gale, dangling in the roadway. He caught hold of one end. As he did so he gave a shriek of pain and dropped dead. His companion fled panic-stricken. The body lay in the roadway for several minutes until the driver of an automobile saw it and notified the police.

Bernavo lived at No. 59 Wardwell avenue, Swampscott. The police think the broken wire is the property of the Lynn Gas & Electric Light Company.

LOCKED IN POOLROOM, TAKEN FOR BURGLAR

Locked up by accident in the poolroom at the corner of Walnut and Fifth streets, Chelsea, William C. Collette of No. 9 Hancock street, Everett, had the misfortune to be mistaken for a burglar when he finally gained his freedom after an imprisonment lasting more than an hour. Collette just before it was time for the poolroom to close went into the basement. While he was gone the proprietor, not knowing that he was still in the building, locked the doors and went to his home. Collette concluded that he must break a pane of glass to make his escape. Patrolman William J. Porter, hearing the crash, rushed to the scene in time to see Collette emerging from a cellar window. The explanation consumed considerable time and involved a promise on the part of Collette to pay for the glass.

FIGHT MELLEN'S TUNNEL PLAN

An attack on the New Haven Railroad was made at the hearing at the State House to-day by William B. Lawrence, who appeared before the Joint Committee on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs in opposition to the Byrnes bill to permit the New Haven and Boston & Maine to acquire the Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad. He said the proposed bill would give the New Haven exclusive rights to the proposed tunnel from East Boston to the South Station, which, he said, was a move to shut the Grand Trunk Railroad out of Boston.

"The bill allows unlimited stock to be issued by the New Haven, Boston & Maine and Revere Beach & Lynn," declared Mr. Lawrence. He charged that the report of the validation commission showed that the liabilities of the New Haven were "something like $450,000,000, with assets of about $394,000,000, and that the railroad was about $56,000,000 shy." He characterized the bill as "absolutely revolutionary."

He said the bill would prevent the Grand Trunk from coming in to share the commercial facilities of Boston Harbor. That railroad would give the longest trans-continental line there is in the world to bring grain to Boston. It should be so, Mr. Lawrence argued, that if the Grand Trunk wants to get at the piers in East Boston, it should have the opportunity to do so.

Town Counsel Orcutt of Winthrop said he did not appear exactly in opposition to the bill, but wished to insist to the committee that the New Haven, if it is given the Narrow Gauge Railroad, shall give as good service as is now given by the Revere Beach & Lynn. President Miskell of the Revere Board of Trade said the people of Revere want to be assured on the matter of fares to Boston that they shall not be any more than they have been. As he understood it the Revere Beach Railroad is to be made a trunk line by the New Haven, and if that is so they wanted that trunk line to give them the same service they are getting now. If they take off the 15-minute time they have had over the Narrow Gauge Railroad they would put them back ten years. The New Haven, as he understood, doesn't propose to take anybody through the tunnel to the South Station, but through passengers. It states that it will carry passengers through there at a reasonable rate. Mr. Miskell thought one cent was a reasonable rate from Revere.

D. A. R. BATTLE OF VOTES IS ON

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The most important engagement of the Spring manoeuvres of the Daughters of the American Revolution is on to-day. Voting has begun for President-General of the organization and other officers, and every available Daughter is on the firing line. Heavy casualties are certain, but the results will not be known for hours.

Advocates of both Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Illinois, standing for re-election as president-general, and of Mrs. William C. Story of New York entered to-day's session claiming victory. Two years ago Mrs. Scott, after a bitter fight, won over Mrs. Story by a small margin. The present campaign has never lagged during the last two years and has been marked by much acrimony. Both sides are claiming that their candidate has gained in popularity since that time.

At the elections of State officers, held by some of the delegations since their arrival here, in some instances administration candidates have won, while in others those favored by Mrs. Story have been elected. These have been about evenly divided, which made it evident when the session opened to-day that the contest would be close.

Administration candidates are: Mrs. Henry L. Mann, vice-president general; Miss Florence E. Pierce, chaplain general; Mrs. H. L. Hodgkins, recording secretary general; Mrs. W. F. Dennis, corresponding secretary general; Mrs. G. M. Brumbaugh, registrar general; Mrs. W. D. Hoover, treasurer general; Mrs. C. W. Bassett, historian general; Mrs. E. S. Thompson, assistant historian general and Miss A. Gillette, librarian general. All are from the district of Columbia except Mrs. Bassett of Maryland and Mrs. Thompson of Massachusetts.

The opposition candidates are:

Mrs. Miranda B. Tulloch, vice-president general; Mrs. W. E. Callender, South Carolina, chaplain general; Mrs. Frank Bond, District of Columbia, recording secretary general; Mrs. W. A. Smoot, Virginia, corresponding secretary general; Mrs. G. M. Pierce, New York, registrar general; Mrs. H. F. Blount, District of Columbia, treasurer general; Mrs. C. A. Thomas, New Jersey, historian general; Mrs. V. H. Bissell, Connecticut, assistant historian general, and Miss Aline Solomons, District of Columbia, librarian general.

Edna Goodrich, Who Is Writing Book

NEW YORK, April 20.—Mrs. Edna Goodrich, emulating the example of her ex-husband, Nat Goodwin, has broken into novel writing.

The book, according to Miss Goodrich, entitled "The Deynard Divorce," is just a plain, old-fashioned novel, with villains and things. Although Miss Goodrich denies that it portrays her own experience, she says that several of the characters are taken from her friends.

The story pivots around the matrimonial troubles of an eccentric old millionaire who is a blue-eyed blond type (Mr. Goodwin gets in under that description) and marries a girl of the stage—a tall, beautiful brunette leading woman, who is "very, very good" (Miss Goodrich is dark and beautiful and to all the rest might fit). The eccentricity of the old millionaire crops out in his raging jealousy because his wife is constantly thrown into the society of a star actor man with whom she plays.

In the end, however, after the old husband had decided to bring suit, naming the actor, their troubles are patched up, everything is explained—the old husband dies.

"Does the actor marry the lady?" Miss Goodrich was asked.

"Didn't I say it was an old-fashioned love story and turns out happily?" answered Miss Goodrich.

The heroine is a New York girl and the scenes are laid in New York, Italy and England.

"Where did the actress meet the millionaire before they were married?" a reporter ventured—"At a Broadway restaurant?"

Miss Goodrich shrugged her pretty shoulders and looked quite shocked.

"Oh indeed no, she was a very charming girl—a leading woman and awfully well bred. She never went to such places," she added.

"And you disclaim that the novel is based on your own experience?" she was asked.

"Well, there are some personal experiences, to be sure, but the heroine is quite another type than I" she added.

Asked if she had written the book before her divorce, she said:

"Indeed, no; Mr. Goodwin hadn't anything to do with it."

BEST TRAIT OF WOMAN IS TOLD

CASH PRIZES IN WOMAN CONTEST

"What is the most excellent trait in woman?"

Write your answer to Eleanor Ames, the AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

The best letter wins a cash prize of $10, the next best $5, and there are $1 prizes for the five next best letters.

By ELEANOR AMES.

Well, how do you like my new contest? Having asked the question I shall answer it by saying that from the number of letters that have come in to my desk the readers of the AMERICAN are much interested in this question:

What is the Most Excellent Trait in Woman?

The answers are interesting. There are many who agree upon the quality which they think most important in woman, but their reasons are different. So you see every letter which I open is delightfully interesting because of the line of reasoning which the writer displays.

The "why" of any question is interesting, but to ask a man or woman what he or she thinks is the most excellent trait in woman and then tell why, and you open up an unlimited field of discussion.

Send in Your Answer!

Now what I want is YOUR opinion. Send your letters to me at the AMERICAN office. Make your letters brief, not over 200 words. Write only on one side of the paper.

For the best letter, the prize is Ten Dollars in cash.

For the second best letter, the prize is Five Dollars.

For the next five best letters there are One Dollar prizes each.

To-day I give just a few of the letters which have already come in.

The best quality in woman is frugality.

Man is essentially wasteful of time, money and health. Woman is frugal, conserving time, money, health and energies, carefully tending her husband and family if she is a wife, holding down, as it were, where the man, if left alone, would waste all.

It is the frugal mother that rears careful, thoughtful children. It is the frugal wife that conserves her husband's income so that when old age comes the children have been educated, there has been plenty for all, and something in the bank or invested in a home for old age.

Dorchester. C. R. CARPETER

Geniality Best Quality.

The best quality in a woman is geniality. A genial disposition from a woman is like dew from heaven upon a parched ground.

When a husband comes home from work, to be met by a genial disposition on the part of his wife, makes ideal happiness.

A husband ought to value this above everything else in a woman. She may be as homely as sin, but if she has a genial disposition, she is mistress of the situation, and will influence hundreds who cannot help but speak well of her.

Then geniality means more in a woman than it does in a man. In a man it is often combined with manly qualities. It is valued when it is so combined. But when a woman is genial and keeps it up after many trying conditions, this with the other traits in her nature, like tenderness and love, make a powerful partnership.

Wellesley. A. C. FLOWER

Refinement Essential.

Refinement, to my mind, is the most excellent quality a woman can possess. She may be beautiful, she may be kind-hearted, she may be blessed with all the virtues of the calendar, if she lacks refinement, there is a large blot on her character.

Perhaps it would be unfit to call refinement a single quality. Rather it is a process which smooths out the rough spots of a woman's character, brings her good qualities to the surface and keeps in the background those spirits of evil in all of us—temper, envy and malice.

True refinement in a woman will no more mix with the baser characteristics than oil with water. If a woman has refinement the other qualities that make or mar a woman's character will take care of themselves.

Economy Her Answer.

The best trait, in my opinion, any woman can cultivate if she wishes to be successful as a wife or a mother is economy. The stories of olden times all point the moral that it was saving wives who enabled their husbands to get the start which made them rich men. Most all the great fortunes in this country were really founded by the thrift of housewives who never wasted a cent of their husband's money. A good financier at home is worth more to any man than an expert foreman in his shop.

AGNES RICHARDSON.

Amiability Best Trait.

I think that amiability is the best trait in a woman for it gives her a greater charm than beauty and more influence at home and everywhere else than any other quality of mind. An amiable woman makes a home where her husband likes to be and children are not apt to be tempted away from it. She is just so much personal sunshine and she radiates content.

KELLY IS HELD IN DEATH CASE

In a low tone Kelly replied in a listless fashion.

"Let Coleman E. Kelly be called," said Clerk Smith, and Kelly stood up, his face averted from the courtroom and half turned from the judge.

Then the charge of murder in the first degree was read to him in so low a tone that it was scarcely audible in the body of the court, and Judge Fallon asked if the prisoner were ready to plead.

Captain Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation then announced that the medical examiner had not arrived, and there was a colloquy between Attorney Creed and Captain Dugan. Mr. Creed asked for a continuance because of the medical examiner's absence, and after a conference with Captain Dugan the court announced that it would grant a continuance until Saturday and hold the prisoner without bail.

Bruise on Cheek.

As Kelly was again led to a cell he turned again to look over the court room and it was noticed that on his left cheek at the point of the cheekbone, there was a purple bruise.

Throughout the disposal of the earlier cases a crowd of curious persons waited eagerly to get a look at the man accused of the killing of Mahoney. Early in the morning every available seat had been filled and there were a score of women among the spectators.

Local politicians were there in numbers and there were also several women and men who had been merrymakers at the wedding party which Kelly is said to have invaded with fatal consequences.

Captain Dugan in Court.

Kelly's mother and his two brothers, Lawrence, who is a constable in the office of the Street Commissioner, and James attracted much attention. Lieutenant Sanford of Station 6, who was at the desk when Kelly was arrested, was in court with Captain Dugan, as were also Sergeant James P. Smith and Detectives Hazard and Keenan, who investigated the case. None was called to testify.

The tragedy for which Kelly is under arrest occurred early yesterday in C street, just after the wedding party broke up. Kelly had gone to the Manning home and had been turned out because he had not been invited. Mahoney is said to have been the man who objected to "Coley" Kelly's presence.

The jollity lasted until nearly 5 o'clock and then Mahoney left with a friend to catch a car for Somerville, where he lived. It is alleged that Kelly had been waiting for him and that when they met Kelly took up a half brick from the sidewalk and hurled it at Mahoney. Mahoney went down, never to get up. His skull was fractured.

Kelly was found later at his home, after the police had broken down the doors, which his brothers refused to open. His statement to the police was that he had thrown the brick in self-defence. Until the time of his arrest he did not know how serious had been the result.

Prisoner an Ex-Councilman.

Kelly is twenty-eight years old, and is married. He was a Councilman from Ward 13 in 1909, and was a candidate for election to the Legislature from that district, but was defeated at the primaries. In the Council he won attention as an advocate of measures to prevent tax dodging, and in work to further public playgrounds and improvements in South Boston. He was the author of a resolution for the appointment of a tax commissioner in Boston. For many years he has been a freight brakeman on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Mahoney was employed in the repair shops of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and was forty-two years old. He leaves a widow, three sons and a daughter, and had been a resident of Somerville, living at No. 21 Joseph street for over twenty years.

LODGE WARNED BY INSURGENT

Representative Alfred Tewksbury of Winthrop to-day sent a red-hot letter to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge in which he advises both Lodge and Crane to keep their hands out of the contest to succeed the late Secretary of State Olin. Tewksbury, who is a staunch Republican and voted for Lodge for re-election, criticises Lodge and Crane for their support of Representative Albert P. Langtry of Springfield for Olin's place. He declares for Russell A. Wood of Cambridge for the place.

Hits at Langtry, Too.

To Representative Langtry Representative Tewksbury hands this shot: "I do not consider that he has acted square, having been the avowed candidate for another State office. To start, the moment that Olin dies, after the position of Secretary is changing front pretty quickly."

Langtry was a candidate for State Auditor from the time Auditor Henry Turner became seriously ill until Secretary Olin died.

Representative Tewksbury's letter to Senator Lodge follows:

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge:

Dear Sir—Perhaps it is unnecessary for me to write you at this time, but I notice that both the Massachusetts Senators have been interviewed and are lined up in favor of Representative Langtry for Secretary of State.

Now I am very sorry that this is so, because while I am a Republican and a very thorough-going, staunch supporter of our senior Senator, I am absolutely opposed to the election of Langtry.

Big Job on Hand.

I do not consider that he has acted square, having been the avowed candidate for another State office. To start, the moment that Mr. Olin dies, after the position of secretary is changing front pretty quickly. Now I have studied conditions pretty carefully since coming to the House in January, and I realize that we have got a big job on our hands to redeem the State. Foss is making a good business Governor and with all due respect for the other candidates, Joseph Walker is the only man who can beat him next Fall.

I am anxious to see the party in full power again and I believe that if we are to accomplish that result we must recognize the young men in the filling of some of the offices.

I know that Russell A. Wood was against us in the election of a Senator, but in spite of that fact he is a bright, capable young man and I believe that his selection at this time would be a help to the party.

I shall do all I can for him and I expect he will win.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) ALFRED TEWKSBURY.

REV. MR. CONRAD IS FOR WOMAN'S BALLOT

"I would rather have the majority of my congregation women than men," declared the Rev. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Congregational Church, to women of the Hyde Park Current Events Club, to-day, "for the reason that I know they will teach religion to their children the way they have learned it. Higher education for women is one of the largest moves in America to-day." The pastor aroused enthusiasm when he said: "The time has come when women have the right to act in legislative matters for the protection of their homes, their children and themselves. We have to watch the men elected to the Legislature."

OFF TO STATE FARM FOR CHURCH SPREE

Daniel J. Nyne, member of a wealthy Dorchester family, was sentenced to the State Farm for drunkenness, and held in $800 for the grand jury by Judge Joseph R. Churchill in the Dorchester District Court to-day. Nyne appealed and was held in $300 bonds. Last night while services were being conducted in the Stoughton Street Baptist Church the worshippers heard a noise in the cellar. The sexton investigated and found Nyne. He telephoned and the patrol wagon from Police Station 11, with Patrolmen James Waldron and James Murrin, was sent to the church, where Nyne was placed under arrest.

50 MORMONS COME ON LINER

There were fifty Mormons in the second cabin of the White Star liner Zeeland when she docked in Boston to-day after a voyage from Liverpool. They included nine elders of the church with Elder W. P. Monson at the head of the party. Elder Monson was accompanied by Mrs. Monson and six children. Thirty-four of the party were immigrants who joined the church in Europe.

Elder Monson, who has just completed three years of missionary service in England and Switzerland, said:

"I intended to land in Montreal, but took the Zeeland for Boston instead, to obtain from Colonel George E. Billings, Immigration Commissioner here, a disclaimer of the statement, attributed to him abroad, that 500 English girls land in Boston weekly and go to Mormon seraglios in Utah and Idaho. That is a sample of the stories which cause persecution of Mormons in England and lead to the stoning of missionairies by mobs."

When asked about magazine articles to the effect the Latter Day Saints are resuming the practice of polygamy, Elder Monson said that the campaign was inspired by former Senators Kearns and Cannon, whom he called "disgruntled politicians."

There were twenty-four saloon, 238 second cabin and 684 steerage passengers on the Zeeland.

BROTHERS RACE TO PORT IN RIVAL SHIPS

The two-masted schooners Laura E. Melanson and the Florence E. Melanson, commanded by brothers, were principals in an exciting race into Boston from Weymouth, N. S. The Laura had three days' start of the Florence, but calms held her back. When abreast of Thatcher's Island, the lookout on the Laura spied the Florence coming like a race horse in the southeasterly breeze. They came in through Broad Sound neck and neck but the Florence dropped her mud-hook off Castle Island a winner by ten minutes.

ART MUSEUM'S HEAD ARRIVES

Jean Guiffrey, new curator of paintings at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, arrived in Boston to-day on the White Star liner Zeeland. He was loaned to the museum by the Louvre in Paris, and will stay here for three years. Each year he will have $200,000 to spend for paintings to bring the Boston collection up to the highest standard.

M. Guiffrey was met at the pier by John Briggs Porter, keeper of paintings at the museum, and this is his first visit to Boston. He is one of the greatest authorities of Europe.

M. Guiffrey's coming to Boston through the courtesy of the French government for so long a period is a high compliment to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and to the people of this city. The Louvre is the most famous art museum in the world, and M. Guiffrey brings a knowledge of paintings which few other living men possess.

Will Reorganize Museum.

As curator he will reorganize the paintings department and before he arrived it was said that he had for his express purpose the strengthening of its collection of pictures by American artists. They believe his stay in Boston will lead to higher appreciation of their work by their countrymen. Paris is full of American artists and some of them have very high standing in what is universally acknowledged to be the art capital of the world. M. Guiffrey thinks that American art should be the strongest feature of American museums, just as the Louvre is the repository of the very best work by Frenchmen. It is a national and typical institution.

Of Artistic Family.

M. Guiffrey is forty-one years old and a graduate of the Ecole de Louvre. Its diploma rates the recipient among scholars with those holding a university degree. For eighteen years he has been assistant curator in the Louvre department of paintings drawings and engravings. He belongs to a family in which artistic taste is inherent. His father was for years director of the Gobelin Tapestry Works, conducted by the French government.

The new Boston curator may go back to Paris next month to attend the sale there then of eighteenth century drawings. Some of them may be bought for the Boston museum.

Mr. Porter will continue to be keeper of paintings. He and the distinguished Frenchman went direct to the museum from the pier.

ATTACKS HIS WIFE, TWICE TRIES HANGING

SOMERSWORTH, N. H., April 20.—John Stanton, thirty-two years old, of No. 22 Elm street, was to-day held in $200 for an attack upon his wife. Stanton was arrested yesterday afternoon and tried twice to commit suicide after his arrest. His wife is in the Wentworth hospital. Stanton and his wife were in the sitting room with their two children, aged four and ten. Suddenly Stanton became angry, seized an iron bar and struck his wife over the head. She fell unconscious. Her condition is critical. Neighbors say that Stanton had been drinking heavily. In his cell he tore up his shirt and tried to hang himself. The rope he made would not hold. Then he tried it with his suspenders, but they too were too weak.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The House Committee on Census to-day favorably reported a reapportionment bill which places the membership of the next House at 433 members, or 435 members, if Arizona and New Mexico are admitted as States.

Among the States which will make large congressional gains if the bill becomes law are the following:

California, gain of three members; Illinois, seven; Massachusetts, two; New Jersey, two; New York, six; Oklahoma, three; Pennsylvania, four; and Texas and Washington two each. A number of States gain one member each.

START PROBE OF G. O. P. WASTE

WASHINGTON, April 20.—A sweeping investigation of government departments and Republican extravagance was made certain to-day, when the House adopted a special rule brought in by the Rules Committee, authorizing nine investigating committees to begin the inquiry.

The special rule enables the committees to have power to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses, including cabinet officers, bureau chiefs and others. The committees will begin at once an inquiry into each government department, to ascertain if there has been any waste of public funds as believed by the Democratic House.

SHOOTING OVER TREE; MAN HELD

James Kenney of Greenwood street, Malden, who late yesterday is alleged to have shot John A. McDonald, also of Greenwood street, after McDonald had cut down a peach tree situated on the boundary line of the two estates, appeared in the Malden court before Judge Bruce charged with assault. He was held in $1,000 for trial on May 4.

The alleged assault occurred early last evening after a dispute between the two men as to the ownership of the tree, which both claimed as his own. McDonald secured an axe and cut down the tree. Kenney obtained a revolver and shot McDonald in the right leg.

MAKES THE HAIR SOFT AND FLUFFY

"In all my experience," says Mae Martyn, writing on "Beauty" in the Los Angeles Examiner, "I have yet to find a shampoo mixture to equal plain canthrox. You can prepare your own shampoo at little cost by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water, and give yourself the finest shampoo imaginable in less time than it takes to go to the hairdresser's.

"The results will be most pleasing. The scalp will be so sweet and clean with all signs of dirt, excess oil and dandruff gone—and your hair be so lustrous, fluffy and easy to do up.

"This shampoo rinses without any evidence of stickiness and the hair dries in a very little time. It is so good and makes shampooing so simple and pleasing that many society women now wash their own hair with it."

WRITES NOTE TO HUSBAND; FLEES

Mrs. Audrey Dreika of No. 72 Williams street, Roxbury, a refugee from Russia, is missing. Her disappearance has been reported to the police by her husband. To-day he will ask for a warrant for her arrest. Dreika claims that his wife left him Tuesday. She kissed him good-bye then and he has not seen her since.

Dreika knew that she had fled when he got home Tuesday night. He found this note:

> "Audrey. We cannot live together any longer. It is better for both of us if we separate. Don't look for me. We are separated forever. A search for me would be in vain. Don't be sorry for me. I wish you well.
>
> "OLGA."

When he got the note Dreika went to the police of the Roxbury Crossing station. He told them that his wife had escaped from a Siberian prison after serving half of a ten-year sentence. She was sent there, he said, for having socialistic literature in her possession.

According to Dreika's story her escape was the direct cause of his marrying her. A friend told him of a beautiful countrywoman who was imprisoned. He asked Dreika's aid. Dreika contributed money. Officials were bribed to let her escape. She came to this country under the name of Klara Boljart. In her home country she was known as Olga Suster.

After she came here Dreika called on her. He despaired of ever winning her love. To the police he said that his despair was unfounded, for she made love to him, and finally proposed that they be married. They were married last September. Dreika says they have been happy. They both worked, and had their home on Williams street. He does not know why she left him.

CARUSO SEEKS MIRACLE CURE

ROME, April 20.—Ciffariello, the Neapolitan sculptor, who obtained notoriety through his trial for wife murder, of which crime he was acquitted, recently exhibited in Florence a plaster bust of Enrico Caruso, the tenor. This was considered a masterpiece of art, as well as a striking likeness of the singer, and the sculptor told a friend that he intended to have it cast in bronze. Recently, however, Ciffariello received a letter from Caruso, then in New York, ordering the bust to be cast in solid silver, regardless of expense.

In his letter the famous tenor explained that he intended to give the statue as a votive offering to the saint through whose intercession he hopes to recover his lost voice. He is said to be firmly convinced that the only effective remedy for his throat trouble lies in the miraculous power of St. Januarius, whose blood, which is preserved in a glass phial in Naples Cathedral, is said to boil twice yearly, on May 9 and September 19, when the saint's feast is celebrated.

Senor Caruso, it is reported, intends personally to assist in the miracle of the boiling blood, and if he is cured will offer the silver bust, which will be placed in a prominent position on the saint's shrine."

St. Januarius suffered martyrdom under Diocletian in 305.

ILLEGAL TO BAR MEN IN UNIFORM

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 20.—The State Senate has passed a House bill making it a misdemeanor for any proprietor manager or employe of a theatre or other public place of entertainment or amusement to discriminate against any person wearing the uniform of the United States. The bill now goes to Governor Tener for approval. It is known he will sign the measure.

THIEVES GET $1,000 FROM EXPRESS CAR

NEW YORK, April 20.—Thieves who rifled an Adams Express car on the Ontario & Western Railroad somewhere between Campbell Hall and Middleton, getting more than $1,000, are being sought to-day by railroad police.

GIRL'S 65-DAY FAST IS ENDED

NEW YORK, April 20.—The "angel visitor" who brought just enough food to keep her alive has deserted Annie Geshella, and after sixty-five days she is taking a little real, terrestrial nourishment, thereby ending one of the most remarkable fasts in the history of modern medicine.

Annie Geshella is now at the New Jersey State Hospital, at Morris Plains, where she was taken from the Passaic General Hospital early in March. At that time she had taken no food or drink, except four glasses of milk and half an orange in more than thirty days, yet appeared to be in normal health, and expressed only repugnance at the sight of food. It was not until the latter part of last week that the physicians at the Morris Plains institution could prevail upon her to take any nourishment, and then she would swallow only a few crumbs of bread and sip a little milk.

The girl, who was born in Austria and has been in this country about fifteen years, went to the Passaic General Hospital February 7.

On her first day in the hospital she ate half an orange and drank a glass of milk, and during the following week she drank two more glasses of milk. She would touch no other food and protested that an "angel" visited her at 4 o'clock every morning and brought a small morsel of bread and a tiny glass of wine.

"God is feeding me," was the reply she would make to the solicitations of the physicians. "When He wants to take me He will stop sending the food, and I am only waiting for that time."

TALK PEACE AT LAKE MOHONK ON MAY 24

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., April 20.—The seventeenth annual meeting of the Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration, to meet here from May 24 to 26, with Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in the chair, will gain especial interest this year from the pending treaty of arbitration between this country and Great Britain, now before the Senate for ratification. John W. Foster, former Secretary of State, will lead the discussion for America, and the Hon. Raoul Dandurand of the Canadian Senate and Henri Bourassa, a Montreal editor, for Canada.

Were Deaf—Now Hear

Remarkable Experience of Those Dead to the World of Sound With a New Treatment for Deafness That Is Wonderfully Efficient. One Month's Treatment FREE.

WERE DEAF—NOW HEAR

Miss Nellie M. Brown, who resides at 84 Prentiss St., East Watertown, Mass., says: "I was very deaf. I could not hear ordinary conversation. I was treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians for two months, and I can hear again as well as I ever did."

Miss Nellie Donovan, 18 High St., Beverly: "I was so deaf that I could not understand ordinary conversation. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me, my hearing has returned."

Mrs. Margaret Kimball, 121 Oliver St., Lynden: "I could not hear a sound with my left ear. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear a watch tick."

Mrs. Fannie Resnel, 15 Vancouver St., Boston: "I was practically stone deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear and understand a lecture."

Mrs. C. S. Baker, 236 Spring St., Medford, Mass.: "I was practically stone deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I hear perfectly again."

ABSCESS AND NEURITIS CURED

Mrs. Malvina Goudie, who resides at No. 11 Crescent St., Medford, Mass., says: "I had been troubled for ten years with Neuritis. I had been treated by many doctors, without receiving any relief until the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated and cured me. I also had an abscess, which the other doctors told me could not be cured without a surgical operation. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians cured it in three treatments."

HAD HEART DISEASE

Miss Dagmar Kleist, resides at 1060 Tremont St., Boston. She said to the writer: "I had been troubled with heart disease since childhood. My father knew how skilful the Osmo-Chemic Physicians were, and he took me to them for treatment, and I feel perfectly well again."

TEN YEARS YOUNGER

Mr. Roland J. Ferguson, who resides at 374 Medford St., Somerville, has been engaged in the trucking business for thirty-four years at 180 Atlantic Ave., Boston. He said to the writer: "If anyone wishes to know what the Osmo-Chemic Physicians have done for me, I will gladly talk with them in person or over the telephone, if they will call me No. 2346-L Richmond. When I went to them for treatment I had so many pains I was fit for nothing. I had had a cough for forty years and I had been told that I had consumption. Doctors had treated me for Pleurisy at different times, but only gave me temporary relief. I read how the Osmo-Chemic Physicians were curing Bronchitis, and I had them treat me, with the result that although I am sixty-nine years of age, I feel ten years younger."

LAST DAYS—ONE MONTH FREE

The Osmo-Chemic Physicians, the great scientists, in order to demonstrate their skill in the cure of deafness by the New Discovery, will give all patients who are deaf, who begin or renew treatment on or before APRIL 29th, one month's treatment, including all medicine, ABSOLUTELY FREE. This liberal offer will bring the cost of a course of treatment sufficient to cure the most obstinate Deafness within the reach of all. Anyone suffering from Deafness can avail themselves of this liberal offer. It is limited only as to time. It is clear that such an offer cannot be continued indefinitely. Only 8 days remain.

MOTHER FREED BY BOY'S PLEA

Sixteen-year-old Roy Baker, the Brockton boy who convinced Judge Reed that he was capable of caring for his three younger sisters, and who pleaded with Governor Foss to release his mother from Sherborn, was to-day rewarded when Executive Secretary Edward F. Hamlin handed him a pardon for her.

The pardon was granted by the Governor and approved by the Council. Young Baker was there to receive it early this afternoon. Tears were in the youth's eyes as he received the paper from Mr. Hamlin. The boy at once started for Sherborn where late this afternoon he was reunited with his mother and the two started for Brockton.

The boy's mother, Mrs. M. J. Baker, was sent to Sherborn last November. The father was adjudged unfit to care for the children some time before that. For several months Roy has been the head of the Baker home. He earns $10 a week and gave it all to the support of the family.

He has three sisters, Mabel, eleven years; Grace, five years, and Marion, eighteen months. With the mother away and the father not doing anything for the family, the question arose as to what should be done with the children. A hearing was held before Judge Reed. Roy appeared in court.

He did not want his sisters to become "charity kids," as he termed it. He was able to take care of them. He made an earnest plea with the Judge, with the result that they were not sent away. Mrs. Mary Couch volunteered to take the four children into her family and let Roy support them there.

A drygoods merchant offered him steady work and $10 a week. Roy jumped at the proposition. He then set to work to have his mother pardoned. He called on Governor Foss himself and pleaded for her. His plea was so eloquent that to-day he got the paper freeing her.

LOUIS BOHNER, OLD TIME ACTOR, IS 76

Louis Bohner of No. 109 Worcester street, a veteran actor in the old Boston Museum stock company and a veteran soldier of the Civil War is seventy-six years old to-day. Next Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Corman, who lives at Green street and Crescent avenue, Dorchester, Mr. Bohner will formally celebrate his birthday, assisted by relatives, friends and G. A. R. comrades. For twenty-two years Mr. Bohner played the part of a darkey in the Boston Museum stock company and still has a wide reputation as a story teller and character actor, although the infirmities of age have greatly restricted his activities.

TECH SHOW GIVEN AT THE SHUBERT TO-DAY

The first Boston performance of "Frenzied French"—Tech show 1911—was set for this afternoon at the Shubert Theatre. The play will also be given Friday afternoon at the Shubert Theatre and at Malden Wednesday evening. "Frenzied French" is a three-act musical comedy by Edwin C. Vose, 1911, of Newtonville, and Wellesley J. Seligman, 1912, of Brookline. It is stated that this year's winsome and winning "girls" are far ahead of Tech shows of past years. F. Hastings Smyth, 1912, as Dolly Carter, is one of the "beauties."

BERESFORD MAY WED MRS. ROCHE

NEW YORK, April 20.—Frequent visits by Seton Robert Beresford, brother of Lord Decies, it was disclosed to-day, are responsible for the report in social circles that Mrs. Burke-Roche, daughter of Frank Work, the millionaire sportsman, who died recently, and from whom the twice-divorced woman inherited more than $1,000,000, is to be wedded to the Englishman. He has been in this country since the wedding of his brother with Helen Vivien Gould. Mrs. Burke-Roche is living in the Hotel Gotham, and "Bobby" Beresford has been a frequent visitor to the handsome divorcee.

Lord Camoys and "Bobby" Beresford for several weeks have been in this city, and in that time they have been busy in society. Camoys left yesterday for Europe, saying there was a girl in this country who was extremely good looking and for whom he professed great admiration.

Beresford, in commenting on the exploits of Lord Camoys, has been more or less reserved in regard to himself, and it never before has been hinted he was considering marriage.

He is forty-two years old. It was understood Mrs. Burke-Roche ridiculed the idea of marrying another Englishman, saying she never would make another venture. Beresford would not commit himself either way.

On his long visit to this country there have been many prophecies as to what might happen, but heretofore the name of the English Lord's brother has been connected with women of the younger set who have not yet been married.

Only recently did the word go around that Mrs. Burke-Roche, whose last husband was Aurel Batonyi, whip, might take another English husband. Thereupon everyone was on the watch, and the frequent visits of the robust, healthy and energetic Englishman were commented on until his name was mentioned as the next husband of Frank Work's daughter.

INVENTOR KILLED BY OWN DEVICE

NEW YORK, April 20.—Victor Palmer, a young inventor, was killed in his home by the latest device he had evolved. In testing an appliance to keep water in a bathtub at an even temperature, one of the gas tubes he used became disconnected and an hour or two after the inventor entered the bathroom to make the test he was found dead in the bathtub, almost covered by water. A physician said that Palmer had been killed by a combination of gas poisoning and immersion.

TIP ON TIPS BY ONE OF TIPPED

CHICAGO, April 20.—Here's the latest and best tips on tips, how, when and how much to tip, by John Henry William Rehm, who has acquired this right to give this tip by his long career as a receiver of tips. Rehm is a waiter, of course. With Henry Hauglusen, also one of the tipped, he is going to Europe to tip the waiters of various nations with some of the tips he has received in this country.

Here are the Rehm rules concerning tips. He gives them freely and expects to tip from those who profit by his tip:

When dining alone, 10 cents.

When dining with a woman, 25 cents.

When entertaining a party, 50 cents or more.

When in doubt, 10 per cent. of bill. Deduct accordingly when the waiter refuses to smile.

Never offer a tip until after service is over.

Be liberal, but don't overdo it.

Rehm will take his wife and two daughters on the trip. They will sail on the Lusitania in the best quarters available, and for three months will "do" Europe in style.

"A waiter should receive $50 a week in tips," said Rehm. "Sometimes when politics are on a waiter can get as much as $10 a day, but other times it runs nearer $5. But it isn't so much getting the tips as saving them that counts."

Rehm admitted he has three cottages in Michigan, another cottage in Edgewater, besides the one in which he lives, and some city bonds.

HOUSEWORK BY HOUR FOR CHICAGO MAIDS

CHICAGO, April 20.—Housekeepers in Oak Park, a fashionable suburb, think they have solved the servant problem. They have no servant girls. Instead, they have the "contracting houseworkers," who do not work by the week. They work by the hour or day, with the number of hours a day distinctly and legally understood, with their own independent homes and home life, and with evenings and Sundays at their own disposal. They are as independent as factory workers and better paid.

POPE HAS SLIGHT ATTACK OF THE GOUT

ROME, April 20.—Pope Pius is suffering from a slight attack of gout. He has been confined to his bedchamber since yesterday afternoon, although the Vatican physicians declare there is no danger, audiences have been temporarily suspended.

NAVAL OFFICERS MUST PAY DUTY

Wives and sweethearts of naval officers and enlisted men were given an unwelcome surprise to-day in orders received to-day at the Charlestown navy yard from Secretary Meyer.

Trinkets, keepsakes and finery brought from abroad after long cruises will no longer come in duty free to the expectant women. Moreover, the officers' mess is likely to suffer and there is apt to be a dearth of the fine wines and cigars for which dinners aboard the battleships are noted.

The following order explains the situation:

Secretary Meyer's Order.

"When any ship of the Navy Department arrives within the United States after having visited a foreign port or ports, the commanding officer thereof, or, in the case of a number of ships in company, the senior officer present shall inform the Collector of the Port and shall hold such ship or ships subject to such customs inspection as the Collector of the Port shall be directed to make by the Treasury Department. Commanding officers shall see that no dutiable articles are landed until after action has been taken by the Collector of the Port.

"The commanding officer shall cause each person on board, who has purchased or otherwise acquired articles abroad which he intends to land, to furnish a list of articles and the prices paid therefor, separately stating articles of wearing apparel and similar personal effects intended for personal use and articles intended for others.

Will Collect Duties.

"The Secretary of the Treasury has instructed the customs officers to examine and appraise such articles and to collect the duties accruing thereon after allowing the $100 exemption upon wearing apparel and similar personal effects intended for personal use. No customs examination of baggage other than that so listed and presented for examination will be made.

"The provisions of this order shall not be construed to delay the movements of any naval vessel engaged in the performance of her duty."

CITIZENS 'TIDY UP' ALL WAKEFIELD

Spurred by the appeal of the Wakefield Improvement Association, Wakefield citizens turned out in force yesterday and scoured their premises, with the result that when night came there was hardly an estate that did not show marked improvement. Many teamsters gave their services and those of their horses and wagons to cart away the refuse. The young men of the town, interested in amateur gardening, assisted by the members of the association, laid out several plots of ground at the junction of streets in the centre of the town and set out hundreds of shrubs.

MOSQUITO FLEET Y. C. PLANS DANCE

The Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club members will gather at International Club Hall, Dudley street for the twenty-second annual ball of the organization, on Wednesday evening, April 26.

The yacht club is one of the most prosperous in Greater Boston and its members take pride in their Winter social events as well as their Summer yachting exploits. The ball this year will be upon an elaborate scale. More than 100 invitations have been issued and the guests will include Mayor Fitzgerald.

HIGGINSON GETS DUKE'S HOUNDS

Twenty English foxhounds from the Duke of Rutland's pack in England arrived on the Warren liner Michigan, consigned to A. H. Higginson of South Lincoln. The duke's hounds are the finest blooded in Great Britain. They were transferred at once to the Higginson kennels. With the new hounds Mr. Higginson will have about forty couples in his pack, the largest and finest private pack in this country.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine.

Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to INSIST upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, giving rise to frequent headache, backache, dragging-down pain or distress and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostation, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages cloth-bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

PIERCE TO WED MRS. CURRAN

Walworth Pierce, secretary of the S. S. Pierce Company, a leading grocery concern of Boston, figures to-day as a principal in a complex international matrimonial tangle, which was revealed in New York when he applied for a license to marry Mrs. Marie Burr Harmon Curran, a relative of the Havemeyers of Sugar Trust fame.

Mrs. Curran, who is twenty-eight, the divorced wife of Guernsey Curran, who is well known in financial circles in Gotham, accompanied the young Boston man when the license was secured at the City Hall in New York.

Walworth Pierce is well known here. He became secretary of the S. S. Pierce Company soon after being graduated from Harvard in 1899.

He resides at No. 250 Beacon street with his father, Wallace L. Pierce, president of the S. S. Pierce Company. The family also has a home in Milton.

It was stated to-day at the Beacon-street house that Walworth Pierce went to New York Tuesday with his father, and that the latter would return Saturday, when the family would go to their Milton residence for the season.

Nine Days Divorced.

The marriage license was secured only nine days after Mrs. Curran had secured her final decree of divorce from Justice Walter H. Jaycox at Riverhead, L. I.

Little has been revealed of the romance of Mr. Pierce and the handsome young divorcee. But from behind the scenes of the love tragedy of the Guernsey Currans, who were wedded with great pomp at St. Thomas' Church, New York, in 1903, comes the love story of his brother, Ross Ambler Curran, who was divorced by his wife in Paris last November.

It is rumored that Guernsey Curran will take for his second bride his former sister-in-law, who was Miss Elsie Postley, daughter of Clarence Postley. She is still in Paris.

The former Mrs. Guernsey Curran was Marie Burr Harmon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Denman Harmon. At her wedding, February 11, 1903, at St. Thomas' Church, the list of guests included many persons prominent in society, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. E. Berry Wall and the Havemeyers.

Last December society was astonished to find that a suit had been filed in the Supreme Court in which the young matron sought a divorce. The testimony presented was from John S. Tucker and two detectives who swore that Mr. Curran had registered at the Hotel Empire November 22, 1910, with "an extremely homely woman," as Mr. and Mrs. George S. Carpenter. Much significance was attached to the description of the woman. The final decree was signed on April 10.

May Marry Sister-in-Law.

In the meantime reports came from Paris that Mr. Curran's sister-in-law, Mrs. Rose Curran, had obtained a French decree from her husband, and that Guernsey Curran was to marry her at the final determination of his wife's suit. Mrs. Ross Curran as Miss Elise Postley, had a prominent place socially in Paris and New York.

One child, a little boy now seven years old, was born to the Guernsey Currans.

Mrs. Curran has lived since the filing of her suit at No. 200 West Eighty-sixth street.

The Pierce-Curran wedding will probably occur next month.

When Mrs. Rose Curran obtained a legal separation from her husband in Paris last November, the charge was "incompatibility" and the cause, it was said, was the unwillingness of the wife to live in this country and of the husband to live abroad.

JUDGE TELLS OFFICER HE SHOULD BE KILLED

CHICAGO, April 20.—"If you had arrested me as you did those two men, I would have killed you and I think the jury would have slapped me on the back and said 'good boy!'" said Judge A. J. Petit in the Cook County Circuit Court, addressing David Hoving, marshal of the village of Bellewood, who was in court for refusing to recognize a writ of habeas corpus.

HERRING STARTS FEATHER SUIT

What's the use of trimming a lady's Spring hat with a fine ostrich plume if the feathers are going to smell like salt herring?

Harris Cohen set up a millinery shop at Harrison avenue and Seneca street on New Year's Day. He rented the shop from B. Prevoir.

A few days later Mr. Prevoir opened a fish market in the basement, under the millinery parlor.

Now Cohen has brought suit against Prevoir. Cohen alleges that the scent of the fish gets into the bird feathers in his millinery stock and spoils them for trade purposes. Fine feathers may make fine birds, thinks Cohen, but fine fish do not help the feathers.

Cohen also alleges that his millinery store is insufficiently heated. In all Mr. Cohen says:

"Nobody likes fishy feathers. I have lost much business through that alone. All I want is what is coming to me by rights."

Landlord Prevoir retorts:

"I have been in America thirty years. Never before was I troubled by a court case. I have given better heat for that millinery shop than I have had for myself."

NEPONSET "MINUTE MEN" ENTERTAIN

Neponset's minute men celebrated their call to arms last night in the Minot School Hall, Neponset avenue. The meeting, which was in the nature of a community betterment night, was held under the auspices of the Neponset Brotherhood, and was attended by about five hundred. Addresses were made by Matthew Cummings on "Neponset's Present Needs," Herbert W. Burr on "Our Dear Native Scenes," H. P. Oakman on "Neponset of Fifty Years Ago," and the Rev. J. P. L. Bodfish on "What the Community Owes to the Soldier." The program closed with a historical pageant.

YALE MAN LAUDS MISSION SHOW

Clad in a Genevan black gown, Dean C. R. Brown of Yale University Divinity School preached at noon to-day from the pulpit of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He told what "The World in Boston" would do for all the churches in this city.

"Every church in this city," said Dean Brown, "through this missionary exposition will become a missionary church. Laymen who are in the habit of looking at things in the business world on a large scale will take a deeper interest in the work of missions and deal with the cause upon a broader and larger basis.

"This exposition will render splendid service in behalf of Christian unity. We will not be talking about how much water we should use in baptism, but we will talk more of spiritual baptism. It will make theology more vital by attending to the fundamentals. Then the churches by this "World in Boston" will understand better these imperfect beliefs and faiths of heathen lands. Missionaries will not go to foreign countries to destroy idols but to fulfill them."

QUICKLY CLEARS THE COMPLEXION

Mrs. Mae Martyn has been addressing large audiences everywhere with her lecture on "Beauty and How to Acquire It," says the San Francisco Call. She said to-day: "With complexions as in dress, simplicity accomplishes most. So many women mistake in thinking high-priced powders and cosmetics best because of their cost.

"Of all skin beautifiers none compares with common spurmax. It makes an ideal, inexpensive face lotion and used daily for a time makes a rough, sallow, lifeless or pimply complexion clear and smooth.

"To make the lotion, get at any drug store four ounces of spurmax and dissolve it in a half-pint hot water, adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. When applied it does not rub off or show like powder and is wonderful for oily, shiny, rough skins. It leaves the complexion clear, smooth and velvety."

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

RULES AGAINST THE OLD COLONY

Attorney-General James M. Swift in an opinion handed down to-day declares that the merger of the Boston & Northern and the Old Colony Street Railways does not change the status of the bonds of the latter so far as their legality as a savings bank investment is concerned. He decides that bonds issued by the purchasing company on account of the Old Colony property will not become eligible prior to June 30, 1913, as investment for saving banks.

The bonds of the Boston & Northern Street Railway are already legal investment, but those of the Old Colony are not.

In an exclusive article in the Sunday AMERICAN it was pointed out that the Old Colony bonds amounted to $8,000,000. The bill, which it is declared would have made the Old Colony bonds legal investment for savings banks, had passed the House and was to be called in the Senate when the AMERICAN called a halt and asked for the opinion of the Attorney-General upon their legality of the Old Colony bonds.

It is the belief of many that the bill was so drafted that the bonds of the Old Colony Street Railway would have become legal investment for savings banks. Despite the opinion of the Attorney-General, if the bill is passed in the Senate, prominent men who still believe that the bill will legalize the bonds in question, will wait upon Governor Foss.

SALOON BAN ON WOMEN IS URGED

A vigorous protest to the Excise Board of Boston against allowing women to be served with liquor in saloons will be made by the board of government of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union, in accordance with the vote of the thirty-fifth annual convention of that organization, held yesterday in Columbus Hall, Malden. Should this appeal fail, the matter will be brought before the Legislature.

MISSION WORK IS UP-TO-DATE

Missionary societies are up-to-date. To-morrow morning at 10 the Women's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society will hold an "Aviation Meet" in Ford Hall, with the "aeronaut in charge" Mrs. H. N. Jones of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. A. J. Loud made the opening address to-day at the fortieth anniversary of this society in the same hall.

"I feel so happy," said Mrs. Loud, "that I came here to tell you ladies that I am ninety-two years old and I have seen this society grow from a small beginning in the Clarendon Street Baptist Church of twenty-five members to its present membership of 50,000 women."

Miss Alice E. Stedman, treasurer of the society, read her report, showing that $179,000 for missions had been raised by the women during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1911. In forty years this society has raised $3,000,000 for missions.

Mrs. C. A. Robinson, one of the home secretaries, told of the progress made through the year in different departments.

Miss Harriet S. Ellis made a report of the home work. Mrs. H. G. Stafford reported for the foreign work. The intercessory service was conducted by Mrs. J. B. Kent and Mrs. F. W. Payne of Connecticut. Dr. Emile Bretthauer described medical work in China. Miss Maud A. Greene gave a historical address and a poem was read by Rev. Henry F. Colby, D. D.

At the session this evening Mrs. Henry W. Peabody will speak on the recent jubilee of women's societies, and an address on "Our Home School" at Capiz, P. I., will be given by Miss Margaret Suman.

Blazing a New Path in Shoe Selling

Cost Plus 5%

YOU folks who buy shoes, ponder on this! Read every word!

You are paying for your shoes ten, twenty, maybe thirty per cent. over net basic cost. The exact amount of this percentage depends on where and when you buy, and from whom.

—Because the Retailer feels he must have twenty per cent. average profit on his goods to keep him happy. And the average Manufacturer wants ten to fifteen.

Now comes the Regal Shoe Company, with four enormous factories, employing over 3,000 hands, making nearly two million pairs of $3.50 to $5.50 shoes last year—and offers you its entire output at just exactly Five Per Cent. Profit over measured, sworn-to, cost.

Think of that! Five per cent. above certified cost, instead of possibly fifteen, twenty, thirty per cent. above variable cost. And this from the same company that gave you the Buzz Saw expose of cheap soles, and "The Window of the Sole"—the same Company that eighteen years ago started the Factory-to-Consumer plan and to-day sells its output in 43 States through nearly 1,000 Regal Shoe Stores and Agencies.

This new "5% Profit" departure in Regal Shoe selling comes from the one shoe Concern in the world that has always given you not only advanced styles but advanced economic methods of selling.

The Regal "Cost Plus 5%" plan means for us a larger volume of business—of course. But for you it means emancipation from the "Get-what-you-can" method of selling goods.

It means that you need no longer be the slave of a trade-custom that arbitrarily fixes prices at the selling end instead of at the making end.

Five per cent. above cost means—for you—a direct, positive, known saving in shoe money that you can see with your eyes and feel with your hands. It means a positive, accurate system of buying and selling that operates with exact justice and exact economy in every locality on the map.

Last year we made and sold over one million, eight hundred thousand pairs of $3.50 to $5.50 shoes. Ponder on that! In dollars and cents the public paid for these shoes nearly Eight Million Dollars.

One cent a pair saving on this output would have handed back to our customers the handsome economy of eighteen thousand dollars. At ten cents a pair, the saving would have given back to them $180,000!

Under the new Regal (5% Profit) Plan you now buy any pair of Regal Shoes under a sworn certified statement of exact cost, figured out to a decimal of a cent. No guesswork. No hit-and-miss estimate; no equivocation; no room for misunderstanding or doubt.

Regalized Shoe Selling blazes a new economic path in merchandizing which other manufacturers must ultimately follow.

So, go you today to the window of your nearest Regal Shoe Store. See what that 5% Profit over a known cost means to you. Then go inside and ask the salesman to take any pair of Regal Shoes out of any carton and explain to you the cost statement on the tag—every item of cost in that shoe. This is how you may more intelligently buy Regal Shoes on a basis of exact cost as manufactured in quantities of nearly two million pairs per year.

OLD DOC COOK PLEASE NOTICE

LONDON, April 20.—Latest bulletins from the South Pole Marathon are that Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, is eight months' ahead of the Captain Scott's British expedition. The bulletin comes from Buenos Ayres, where Captain points out that the Fram is to return to the rived from the Antarctic Circle.

The Fram brought this message from Amundsen: "Landed on Antarctic ice barrier with eight men, 115 dogs and provisions and fuel for two years. Station established 78 deg. 24 min. S., 352 deg. W. Dash south begins upon departure of the Fram. All well." The date is not given.

The Daily Mail, which suggests that 352 deg. W. means 172 deg., speaks of Amundsen's plan as the greatest feat ever attempted in polar exploration and points out that the Fram is to return to the Antarctic to pick up the explorers in October next, which was the month in which Scott proposed to start his dash for the Pole.

The exact date when the Fram left the Antarctic is unknown, but Scott's vessel, the Terra Nova, found trace of her February 4. Presumably the Norwegian party had not then begun the march South, but was about to start. A dash South at such a season must involve risks never before taken. February in the Southern hemisphere corresponds with August in the Northern and is near the end of a brief Summer. A party starting then would have to face the unknown perils of the Antarctic Winter with its perpetual night.

BOSTON PLAGUE IS DESCRIBED

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Infanti paralysis which first appeared in epidem form in Boston and vicinity four yea ago, when there were several hundre cases reported, was described before th National Academy of Sciences by Dr. Simo Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute fo Medical Research. He said:

"We can now affirm with certainty tha infantile paralysis is a disease due to sp cific microorganism, or germ, that attack the spinal cord and, to a less extent, th brain, and by merely injuring or destroy ing the nervous tissues causes either temporary or permanent paralysis of th muscles.

"The specific cause or germ has bee known for about a year and a half, sin which time the disease has been unde accurate scientific investigation throug transmission to monkeys. Prior to th recent period almost no knowledge wa possessed of the nature of poliomyeliti and all our accurate knowledge has bee gained since then through experiment upon animals."

The germ is very minute and capable o passing through the pores of the fines earthen filters, Dr. Flexner says, and t reduce the danger of infection he advise more stringent and thorough measures fo the disinfection of secretions of the nos and mouth and the maintenance of cleanli ness in those parts. He says:

"The control of infantile paralysis mus be by prevention, since no specific remed or cure for it is known."

OUR HELD FOR AUTO KILLING

NORTH ATTLEBORO, April 20.—Ar gned in the District Court today on a rge of manslaughter as the result of his tomobile striking and killing George unt and fatally injuring Miss Lottie omas, Hunt's fiancee, Charles H. W y, a wealthy jeweler of this town, reals the seriousness of the charge more an he did last night, when he lightly marked:

It doesn't matter how it happened. My surance will take care of it all."

Day made this reply to the tremblingly de query of the aged father of the dying rl as to how he happened to run down e young couple.

Attacked by Father.

Enraged by the brutality of the man cused of killing his daughter and her nce, Thomas rushed at Day. So did e father of young Hunt. But for the terference of a squad of policemen and hers the owner of the car would have en roughly handled.

Day is also charged with operating an tomobile without a license and with runkenness. Edgar D. Kelley, George A. Hancock, proprietor of a grocery store ere, and his son Edward, who were in ay's auto at the time of the accident, ere also arrested on warrants charging hem with manslaughter and held in $2,500 ail each. Day's bail was fixed at $5,000.

The police say that Day and friends vere returning from a "joy ride" to Pawucket and that all the occupants of the ar were under the influence of liquor. Hunt and Miss Thomas were walking on Washington street near their homes. They vere to have been married in a few veeks. The car struck them from behind. Hunt was killed instantly. Miss Thomas s dying at her home. Her skull was fractured and she was otherwise injured.

Auto Going Fast.

Eye-witnesses of the occurrence say the ar was going at a rapid rate. Kelley, who was on the front seat of the auto with Day, says the speed was not more than fifteen or twenty miles an hour. He was the only one of the auto party able at first to give a coherent account of the affair. When he first saw the young couple in the road ahead they appeared to be so close to the machine, he said, that they looked as if they were between the rays thrown by the headlights. An instant afterward he realized that the car had hit someone, but he did not know exactly what until the automobile was stopped and they went back to look.

$15,000 AWARD IN ALIENATION SUIT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 20.—"Men must not forget to love their wives," said a thoughtful appearing juryman as the panel which awarded $15,000 damages in an alienation of affections suit filed out of the Superior Court. The plaintiff was Mrs. Elvira Paolino, wife of Joseph A. Paolino, prosperous real estate dealer of this city. It was charged that the defendant, Nincencina Graziano, exerted an unusual influence over Paolino and stole his affections.

SEVERAL DOCTORS TO QUIT SCHOOL WORK

Several of Boston's school physicians have notified the Board of Health of their intention to withdraw from this branch of the city's service as the result of the added work which the Board proposes to put upon the school medical staff. Despite the fact that the salaries of these doctors are to be raised from $200 to $500 a year, many of the doctors have sent word to the health board of their intention to quit. They say that they cannot give the time to the work that the new regulations exact.

TWO BROTHERS TAKE ORPHANS

"These two children seem so happy that I will grant the petition, but as a usual thing I don't allow children of one nationality to be adopted by people of another nationality," said Judge Grant in the Probate Court to-day.

As the result of his decision two Italian brothers who are not blessed with any children were each allowed to adopt a two-year-old child. The wives of the two brothers were in court and later took the children home.

The children adopted are Joseph Malone and Charles F. Ingraham.

The new fathers of the children are Antonio and Peitro Sclaramitaro, both of whom live in the North End. The children came from St. Mary's Infant Asylum.

HOTEL IS BURNED.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., April 20.—Nicoletto's Hotel and two dwelling houses at Pyrites, St. Lawrence County, were burned early to-day with a loss of $15,000.

FIVE NEW BILLS FOR NEXT WEEK

Jess Dandy of "The Prince of Pilsen" has been telling everybody how nicely he made the trip from New York to Boston in his new automobile—and he has been getting away with it. What he didn't explain was that somewhere between Springfield and one of those almost obscure points on the map several miles to the east, fire was discovered in the machinery and real disaster threatened the lives of the party. Mr. Dandy, being round and heavy left the investigation of the fire to Robert O'Connor, who was one of his guests. The balance of the party took to the woods to await the awful explosion. The flames were subdued but Mr. Dandy and his friends finished the trip to Boston by rail. The car was towed to town, and Mr. Dandy's terrible secret would never have been known if the repair man who came along with the car had been discreet and silent.

Word comes from Chicago that Julian Eltinge, who is playing there with "The Fascinating Widow" has received the biggest offer ever made an American entertainer from a foreign promoter. Mr. Eltinge's offer came from the management of the Coliseum, London's largest vaudeville theatre, and was for $20,000 for four weeks during the coronation period. This salary is said to be equalled only by the salary paid to Sarah Bernhardt, who presented a condensed version of "L'Aiglon" at the same house at the same salary. Eltinge did not accept.

FENWAY POSTOFFICE TO BE SUB-STATION

A dispatch to-day from Washington says that Senator Lodge has taken up with the Postmaster General the matter of consolidating the Fenway postoffice with the Back Bay postoffice in Copley square.

It is further stated that the Fenway office will not be abolished and that the effect of the Postmaster General's order will be to transfer the letter carriers from Fenway to Back Bay so that distribution of all mail for the patrons of both offices will be from the Back Bay office. This office is equipped with a pneumatic tube service and distribution can be effected more easily from there.

Trusses Like These Are A Crime

Get Rid of Belts, Elastic Bands, Springs and Leg-straps—They Are Simply Slow Suicide.

Trusses like those shown above—the belt and leg-strap, elastic and spring contraptions—sold by drug stores, surgical instrument houses and many self-styled "Hernia Specialists"—make life miserable for everybody who wears them—wearing them is simply slow suicide.

And—even when drawn so tight you can scarcely stand to keep them on—they do no good whatever.

Instead, they often do immense harm—they squeeze the rupture, often causing strangulation—dig into the pelvic bone in front—press against the sensitive spinal column at the back.

Greatest boon to the ruptured the world has ever known—no "medicine" or "treatment" —no operation—no loss of time from work —no springs, elastic belts or leg straps to wear. And won't cost you a cent if it doesn't result in immediate improvement.

The Plain Truth Is This.

Rupture—as explained in our free book—can't be relieved or cured—can't even be kept from growing worse—unless constantly held in place. Just as a broken bone can't "knit" unless the parts are held securely together.

And—just as a bandage or splint is the only way a broken bone can be held—the right kind of truss is the only thing in the world that can keep a rupture from coming out.

What a difference it will make when you get that kind of truss.

And you can get exactly that kind of truss—without risking a cent of your money.

It's the famous Cluthe Truss or Cluthe Automatic Massager.

Far more than a truss—far more than merely a device for holding the rupture in place.

Self-regulating, self-adjusting.

No belt, elastic band or springs around the waist, and no leg-straps—nothing to pinch, chafe or bind. It is held in position by [illegible] can't shift or slip—the only truss in existence that is honestly guaranteed never to let the rupture come out.

Try It Without Risking A Penny.

We have so much faith in the Cluthe Truss—we have seen it work wonders for so many others—that we want to make one especially for your case and let you wear it at our risk.

We'll give you plenty of time to test it—if it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out, when you are working and at all other times—if it doesn't put an end to the trouble you've heretofore had with your rupture—if you don't get better right away—then the truss won't cost you a cent.

The Healing Massage.

In addition to holding the rupture, the Cluthe Truss or Cluthe Automatic Massager is constantly giving a soothing, strengthening massage to the weak ruptured parts.

All automatically—the massage goes on all day long, all without any attention whatever from you.

This massage—which strengthens just as exercise strengthens a weak arm—is so remarkably beneficial—so remarkably curative—that in 199 cases out of every 200 rupture begins to get better from the day a Cluthe Truss is put on.

Two Cents Brings It.

Don't go on letting your rupture get worse—don't spend a cent on account of your rupture until you get our book of advice—which two cents for a stamp—or a penny for a postal—will bring you.

This remarkable book—cloth-bound, 60 pages, 21 separate articles, and 19 photographic pictures—took us over 40 years to write—took us that long to find out all the facts we've put in it.

It explains the dangers of operations and why they don't always cure to stay cured. Tells why drug stores should not be allowed to sell trusses any more than a schoolboy would be allowed to perform an operation.

Explains why belt, spring and elastic trusses can do no good. Exposes the fake "free" offers, fraudulent claims and humbug "methods," "appliances," etc.

And tells—absolutely without misrepresentation—all about the Cluthe Truss—just how it holds—how it gives the curing massage—how it is waterproof—how it ends all expense—how you can get it on trial—and gives names and addresses of over 4,000 people who have tried it and want you to know about it.

Write for it to-day—don't put it off—this book may be the means of adding many years to your life and of restoring you to full strength and usefulness.

Simply say in a letter or postal "Send me the book." In writing us, please give our box number.

Box 20—CLUTHE INSTITUTE

The minute it takes to write for this book may free you from suffering for the rest of your life.

TILDEN MAY BE SENT TO JAIL

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 20.—With the stand of Edward Tilden, from whom has been demanded the record of his personal checking account in an effort to clear up transactions in the distribution of the $100,000 Lorimer corruption fund, still in doubt, the State Senate committee to-day resumed its investigation of the election of Lorimer to the United States Senate. Tilden now is regarded as the most important witness to be heard. His check books are expected to show to whom the money collected to buy votes for Lorimer was distributed.

Unless he produces the records, members of the committee declared that he would be sent to jail for contempt.

Edward Hines, the lumber millionaire who was accused by Clarence Funk, general manager of the International Harvester Company, asking him for a $10,000 contribution to the fund, will be recalled to the stand.

Another prominent witness will be former Senator Albert J. Hopkins, who was defeated for the Senate by Lorimer. Subpoenas have been served on nearly 20 members of the Assembly and politicians who were in Springfield at the time of Lorimer's election, and all were expected to report to the committee to-morrow.

MOTHER FREES WAYWARD SON

Joseph Galvin of No. 191 Eighth street, South Boston, owes his liberty to-day to the fact that his aged mother won the ear of Judge Fallon of the South Boston District Court to-day before her boy came up to plead on a charge of drunkenness.

Galvin had been in a cell since Tuesday night and he was very sober and very downcast when he was arraigned. He insisted that the charge was groundless, but Patrolmen Walsh and Donohue, who appeared against him, told the Court that they had to carry him to the patrol box. Judge Fallon therefore found him guilty, but said:

"Galvin, your record for drunkenness is very bad. Your poor old mother, however, has been here to see me and to intercede for her boy. With all your bad habits, she says, you have been a kind son to her and you turn over to her most of your earnings. If you can do that and can remember the debt that you owe her, I am inclined to be lenient with you. I therefore place your case on file. You are free to go home to comfort her."

KILLS HERSELF AT 87.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—Mrs. Mary Longo, aged eighty-seven years, mourning the death of her husband, committed suicide here by inhaling illuminating gas.

EDNA DESMOND, NEAR DEATH IN MALDEN TRAGEDY

MISS EDNA DESMOND

GIRL'S STORY OF MALDEN TRAGEDY

[illegible] Tallon, [illegible] fifty-four-year-old metal worker, lies dead today at No. 754 Salem street, Malden. He shot himself after twice wounding his wife and trying to kill his stepdaughter, Edna Desmond. The girl owes her life to the fact that she took to her heels as soon as she saw the revolver in Tallon's hands. Her story of the tragedy told today to an AMERICAN reporter is as follows:

"We had company at the house, and toward evening mother and I went to the kitchen to prepare supper. Mrs. Golding, who lives downstairs, came up with some [illegible] and some doughnuts she had made, but my stepfather refused to take any and went to his room. Pretty soon he came back and made a remark to me. I answered him back, and so did mother.

"He whirled around, ran to the bureau where he kept his revolvers and pulled them out. Frightened, I ran to the stairs. He followed and fired a shot at me. I heard the bullet plunge into the woodwork of the street door. He fired again and the bullet skimmed my head. My legs [illegible] out from under me and I fell.

Crawled to the Cellar.

"Somehow I managed to crawl on my hands and knees to the cellar. Then I heard him coming and I pulled myself to the bulkhead, burst open the door and ran to the street. There I saw him coming out of the door with the revolver in his hand. He fired at me again and missed, then he fired two more shots. I screamed for help and fell. He evidently thought he had hit me, and as some men came running up he started back into the house."

While the girl was in the cellar Tallon had returned upstairs and had fired twice at his wife. She fell with a bullet in her neck. Then Tallon ran after her daughter again. When he got back to the room where he had left his wife, she had gone, having slid down the stairs to the apartment of Mrs. Golding, who took her in. Tallon turned the revolver on himself and fell dead with a bullet through the head. [illegible] the house.

Mrs. Tallon was hurried to the office of Dr. Walton J. Holland, where her wounds were treated. Then she was brought back home in a carriage.

Woman Will Recover.

"My husband seemed peaceable enough up to the moment of the shooting," she told the police, "but he must have planned the whole thing. I did not know he had the revolvers in the house."

Mrs. Tallon's condition was reported as favorable to-day and the doctor said she would recover.

The tragedy is said to be the outcome of repeated quarrels. Tallon, who was a widower, married Mrs. Desmond, a widow, [illegible] years ago. With her two daughters, Edna Desmond, who is twenty, Alberta Desmond, who is fourteen, and a nephew, [illegible], Bernard Desmond, she went to live in the Tallon home in Salem street, in the Maplewood section. The younger children were away from home at the time of the shooting. Mrs. Golding reports that several times during quarrels between the couple, Mrs. Tallon had threatened to leave her husband. He had lived in Malden twenty-seven years. His brother, Nicholas Tallon, is a policeman, assigned to the East Boston station.

NEW HAVEN IN RAILROAD WAR

PROVIDENCE, April 20.—[illegible] the New Haven Railroad is attempting to block the Southern New England [illegible] company [illegible] and prevent it from crossing its line [illegible] has created a sensation here. [illegible]

It was openly stated that the new [illegible] the New Haven [illegible] is simply another effort on the part of New Haven to block the Grand Trunk's [illegible] to get to tidewater at this [illegible] terminal [illegible] two [illegible]

Ruse Is Charged

[illegible] the acceptance of any proposal from the New Haven road that the Grand Trunk privileges over its tidewater rails be restricted to a switching arrangement in the former's hands would simply mean the destruction of the Grand Trunk's business by enforced tieups and delays in the delivery of freight and passengers.

[illegible] of Providence.

The Mayor's View.

[illegible] the Harbor Junction branch and the Allens avenue tracks [illegible] used jointly by both roads. [illegible] from Roger Williams Park.

"If it were necessary for the Grand Trunk to tear through that section to get to tidewater we would have no objection, but it is not at all necessary. There are rails there now. The New Haven owns them, but they are not used much. Only about five trains a day use these tracks. They are not overcrowded.

"But the New Haven objects to this. Remember that it is the people of Providence who are vitally interested. Representing Providence, I say there is only one thing to do.

"Tell these roads that we want no duplication. The Harbor Junction branch and the Allens avenue lines must be used jointly. The Providence city government says it favors the Grand Trunk plans. We object to the substitute New Haven plan."

Insists on Grand Trunk Rights.

"The city of Providence does not approve the plan of the New Haven road," declared City Solicitor Baker. "It does not approve the switching scheme. It insists that the Grand Trunk shall be allowed to run its own cars under its own steam to tidewater."

Vice-President Fitzhugh of the Grand Trunk in a further discussion of the plan stated:

"We accept the plan outlined by the city of Providence for the joint use of the tracks.

"Failing that, we accept the plan, suggested [illegible] our own tracks right down to tidewater.

"The switching proposition we cannot accept for [illegible]. We must go to tidewater under our own power and we must not be left at the terminal in the control of another operator. If we are going to bring transcontinental business here we must have adequate terminal facilities."

City Solicitor Baker read the resolution of the City Council favoring the original Grand Trunk plan, but concluding with [illegible] joint use of the lines would be even better than the Grand Trunk plan.

Mr. Baker showed the impracticability of the New Haven plan and came to the conclusion that the two roads should join rails at a point between Elmwood avenue and Broad street and should have joint use from there down. He did not approve the switching plan proposed by Mr. Buckland. Mr. Baker insisted that the Grand Trunk should be allowed to run its cars under its own steam to tidewater.

E. H. McHenry of the New Haven said it appeared funny to him that the Grand Trunk should want to use the Allens avenue tracks and Mr. Morosck explained that the Grand Trunk would have to go through there to get to the new State [illegible]

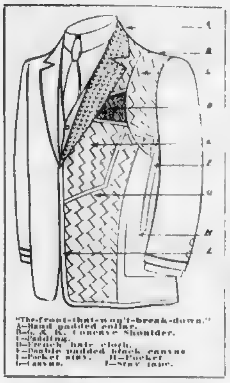
THIS CLOTHING AD WILL MAKE YOU THINK TWICE

—GALE & KENT



WE have learned—after 19 years' experience in the tailoring business—that any man who thinks twice will decide in favor of a tailor when he wants good clothes.

Compared to the extravagant claims of the ready-made firms, our statements as good tailors seem mildness personified. But we are modest men. We cannot do impossible things. We do not claim to set the world afire every morning when we open our place of business. We conduct a tailoring business and not a circus maximus.

We do build a few thousand suits of clothes in a year—pretty good suits, if we know anything about suits—very good suits, if our patrons can be credited with knowing what they buy and pay for year after year.

There is no more comparison between a good tailor-made suit of clothes and a ready-to-wear suit than there is between the Great Busoni and a pianoleon. One is the artist. The other is a machine. One is the original—never twice alike—saturated with personality. The other is a reproduction—always the same—a stale and flat mechanical copy.

Some folks might not know the difference. Some people prefer rag-time to Beethoven—a sign-painter to Michael Angelo—chalk to marble. To the men who don't know the difference—who think once and then let a salesman sell them something that was made in car-load lots, to be sold to anybody it might happen to fit—something called a snappy suit because the English language is so elastic when carelessly applied—we say, firmly and politely, "G-o-o-d Night."

But to those men who feel competent to choose their own goods for a suit of clothes—who feel that their money is good enough to get the very best that the market affords—who want a suit made for them only, adjusted to their personality, fitted to their individual requirements—we offer the very best facilities in Boston for getting just what they want.

We will make a suit of clothes from the handsomest line of new woolens to be seen in any tailor shop in Boston. You don't order by samples, here. The goods are all in-the-piece, about 2000 or more styles—the very cream of the world's woolen mills.

Your measures will be taken by a designer who knows the styles—who consults your taste in every particular—who accommodates the prevailing fashions to your personal needs. The designers at our shop do not cut cloth. They draught patterns. We have a cutting force to cut the cloth, after each piece is shrunk in a special sponging process of our own—that costs about 1000 yards of shrinkage annually. The coat is tried on—after it is put in skeleton form. All the little kinks are taken out of it. The shoulders are set correctly. The coat back is shaped. The lapels are moulded carefully in the right angle from the collar. The collar is set firmly in place around the neck. Then the entire suit is finished.

After a suit is finished in our shop there is no shifting of buttons—no squaring of the lapels—no lengthening or shortening of the coat sleeves or trouser legs. All these little details have been taken care of—all the essentials completed—in order that we may produce perfect clothes for men who want the best—provided the best is within reach of their pocketbooks.

The prices for a Suit (or Overcoat) made at our shop—every coat being designed with our famous registered pattern of "The-front-that-won't-break-down," range from

$15 to $25—SUIT (or TOPCOAT)

The cloth, alone, determining the price

We guarantee everything to be absolutely satisfactory in every way or we will return your money. We have had just one case of that kind since January 1st. We only mention it so that you can feel entirely at ease in giving us your first order.

You want a new suit. We want to make it for you. We are a little out of the beaten path, but nobody seems to mind after he has once been over here, so we suggest that you drop around this way, any time you feel like getting a new suit of clothes, and let us show you some goods that are worth making into a suit of clothes for a gentleman.

NO CHANCE FOR TOUGH MAN TO MEET MORRIS

By ED W. SMITH.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 20.—No real tough man is going to get a chance very soon to meet the pugilistic hope, Mr. Carl Morris of Oklahoma.

This is the statement made by Jim Barry, the Chicago heavyweight, who arrived here a couple of days ago from Oklahoma with some good opinions of men and things in that section.

Barry says Morris, as he stands at the present time, represents an expenditure in actual money of close to $25,000, by [illegible] [illegible] Morris before taking any [illegible] chances of his being whipped. [illegible] knows that if something husky comes along and [illegible] Morris up, the money now invested in him is as good as burned up.

No Chance for Barry.

Hence, when Barry, [illegible] there is no chance [illegible] posted [illegible] of $1,000 his own money in Oklahoma and announced that a syndicate of [illegible] men of that place would sweeten the pot with $1,000 more, as a side bet. Barry was told that Morris wasn't looking for his [illegible] chance of getting [illegible]

[illegible] Billy Stone, the original Morris [illegible] $5,000 [illegible] Kansas City [illegible] at the whole [illegible] opportunity to get it from [illegible]

[illegible] Morris in fifteen rounds [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the end of the first five rounds [illegible] he was to win [illegible] We considered it a fair offer [illegible] the Morris people.

Yes, I saw him fight [illegible] and what a joke it was! Did you see the pictures? [illegible] now they are saying [illegible] because they were taking the pictures which were to be showed all over the country that they wanted Morris to be clever and cut out a lot of rough stuff. And further they are saying that he did try to [illegible] and that's why he didn't [illegible] a couple of punches. That's [illegible] take it from one who watched every move in the fight. It's my opinion that Mike might have won out for we [illegible] for something [illegible].

In the fifth round [illegible] the giant so hard on the nose that the blood spurted out. Watch [illegible] the pictures and you will see Morris put his glove [illegible] his nose several times and [illegible] from Mike, all the time looking at the blood on his glove. [illegible] men don't do that. Tush with this Morris false alarm. He hasn't a neck as big as [illegible] and the [illegible] James [illegible] little of the [illegible] hand forefinger.

To Fight Smith.

Barry whipped Jack Homan of Chicago [illegible] Oklahoma in four rounds last week [illegible] says that Jack is a tough fellow [illegible] be real good when he has more experience.

Jim stopped off here on his way to Oakland, Cal., where [illegible] "Gunboat" Smith of California the latter part of the month. He tried to get a [illegible] here with Al Kaufman who [illegible] forty-two rounds, but they couldn't come to terms.

Coach [illegible] this crew suit him as perhaps [illegible] get together and [illegible] would probably row as the varsity [illegible] of the experimenting [illegible] been going on for the last month there is no doubt the men will stick. The [illegible] changes came when Elliott was laid [illegible] out for a [illegible] [illegible] at bow [illegible] from last year's junior eight [illegible]

[illegible] who stroked the freshmen crew [illegible] stroke oar of the four-oared crew. The new varsity [illegible] Bowen and W[illegible], two of last year's [illegible] Ferguson and [illegible] sophomore [illegible]

The combination [illegible] of the four [illegible] has also been settled [illegible] bow, Small, 2, Lafferty, 3, Doe, stroke.

He Expected a Letter

"I[illegible] a letter here for James [illegible] [illegible] manager [illegible] general [illegible] window.

"There is [illegible]

"[illegible] last [illegible] makes [illegible] of you [illegible] have every reason [illegible] for James [illegible] I am just as sure of [illegible] it before me. I came in here politely and ask you in the most [illegible] possible if there is any [illegible] 'there isn't,' and [illegible] that I [illegible]

[illegible] last [illegible] from the government [illegible] you any right to insult a [illegible] if they saved the Union [illegible]

[illegible] that letter or the [illegible] you know you'll get [illegible] from your old schoolmate, Postmaster [illegible] Hitchcock, asking you to hand in your resignation.

"There is no letter here for James Foxworthy [illegible]," said the postmaster, calmly. "I have looked over the letters a dozen times in the last hour. If it will make you feel better, however, I'll go over them again."

A Suspicious Inquirer.

"You'd better go over them if you value your official snap. And if that letter isn't there, the best thing you can do is to hunt around the office until you find it. I'm a bad man to fool with.

"[illegible] all I know you may have the letter in your hip pocket. A man who will insult a stranger who steps up to the delivery window and asks, in the most courteous manner, for a letter for James Foxworthy Shoonover, wouldn't hesitate [illegible] other people's mail, especially if [illegible] looked as though there might be [illegible]

"The impudence of a country postmaster is something intolerable. You swell up with false pride and imagine you are [illegible] Government. When, as a matter of fact, you are the smallest cog in the whole blamed machine.

"If you fell off the earth right now and took your one-horse postoffice with you, the Government would go along and never know it.

"A postmaster should be the most humble and obsequious of men, for he is enjoying a soft snap at the expense of the taxpayers.

"I have no doubt that when you saw a letter from the White House your curiosity mastered you and you opened and read it and then hid it to destroy the evidence of your crime. But wait until you see what Taft does about it. He won't stand for any [illegible] friend James Foxworthy Shoonover.

The Manicure Lady's Return

"I HAVE just come back from the coast of Maine," said the Manicure Lady. "I never want to go back there, no more, unless it is in the witching month of June, when all them roses is blooming again beside the river, and them robin redbreasts is singing in the trees.

"Maine is certainly bleak these days, George. The old gent felt it worst of all. The State is as dry as a shingle on a Arizona barn."

"That must have tried the old dub, at that," said the Head Barber. "From all you have told me about him, I imagine that he wouldn't be beaming much in a locality where drinks is scarce.

"I was up in Maine once myself, but that was in the good old wet days. I was born in Maine, Kiddo, born on the water, you might say. I used to love the roar of the surf on the storm rocks, and I used to watch the fishermen putting out in their boats with their reels an their fishing lines. I love Maine, even to this day."

"The old gent didn't love it," said the Manicure Lady. "He wouldn't mind the drought so much, I guess, if he hadn't taken brother Wilfred along; but Wilfred knew that the old gent was up there trying to forget forever the Demon rum, and every night, after every long, hard, dry day, Wilfred used to get out on the porch of the hotel, where he was staying, and he used to take his guitar and set next to father, and sing songs like 'With a Stein on the Table,' and 'Here's to Good Old Lager, Drink It Down.'

"Honest to goodness, George, you never in all your born days heard so many drinking songs. I didn't know there were so many. When the old gent asked Wilfred to play something classic Wilfred played and sung 'Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes.'

"I read a desert story once about a caravan that got lost. The story said that every member of the caravan became a lunatic. It said that their tongues was sticking out like the tail of a black cat. I have never forgot the picture that writer painted, and, take it from me, George, not one of them had anything on father.

"As soon as Wilfred would get tired of singing them drinking songs, some young lady would get up on the porch and recite poems from the old masters, like that poem of Mister Scott's where the old stag drank his fill, or that thing Mister Coleridge wrote, 'Water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink.'

"I remember one night in particular, while we was all setting out on the cool veranda just as the sun was sinking away in the west. One of the young lady boarders had been reading about that Persian poet, Mister Cayenne, or whatever his name is, and she had wrote a little poem of her own while everybody except the editors had liked very much. She recited part of it for the guests. It was called 'In Praise of Wine.' I don't remember much of it, George, but part of it went like this.

'The grape, the grape, the cooling grape
I drank it first in old Almiry;
I had to then remove my cape
Because I felt so fine and fiery.'

"That was the way things went along, George," said the Manicure Lady. "It seemed as if Pa couldn't have picked out a worse place for a rest from the hard stuff. I sure have to give it to the old hero, though. He just shut his teeth hard, all the time, and refused to fall for all them suggestions which was being suggested out on that porch."

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet

THE WAR IN THE AIR

The Battle of the Races for Supremacy. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

THE incident that gave him his third shock was the execution of one of the men on the Adler for carrying a box of matches. The case was a flagrant one. The man had forgotten he had it upon him when coming aboard. Ample notice [illegible] every one of the [illegible] [illegible] points [illegible] over the [illegible]

[illegible] defense was that he had grown so used to the notices and had been so preoccupied with his work that he hadn't applied them to himself; he pleaded in his defense what is indeed in military affairs another serious crime, inadvertency.

He was tried by his captain and the sentence confirmed by wireless telegraphy by the prince and it was decided to make his death an example to the whole fleet. [illegible] the prince declared [illegible] [illegible] hang the [illegible]

[illegible] like carp in a [illegible] the Adler hung at [illegible] alongside the flagship. The [illegible] crew of the Vaterland assembled upon the swinging gallery.

The crews of the other airships manned the air chambers—that is to say, clambered up the outer netting to the upper sides. The officers appeared upon the machine gun platforms. Bert thought it an altogether stupendous sight, looking down, as he was, upon the entire fleet.

Far off below two steamers on the rippled blue water, one British and the other flying the American flag, seemed the latest objects and marked the scale. They were immensely distant. Bert stood on the gallery, curious to see the execution, but uncomfortable because that terrible blond prince was within a dozen feet of him, staring terribly, with his arms folded and his heels together in military fashion.

They hanged the man from the Adler. They gave him sixty feet of rope so that he should hang and dangle in the sight of all evil doers who might be hiding matches or contemplating any kindred [illegible]

Bert saw the man standing [illegible] no doubt, scared and relet [illegible] outwardly [illegible] on the lower gallery of the Adler [illegible] yards away. Then they [illegible] overboard.

Down he fell, heels and feet extending, until with a jerk he was at the end of the rope. Then he ought to have died and swung edifyingly, but instead a more terrible thing happened. His head came right off, and down the body went spinning to the sea, feeble, grotesque, fantastic, with the head racing it in its fall.

"Ugh!" said Bert, clutching the rail before him and a sympathetic grunt came from several of the men beside him.

"So!" and the prince, stiffer and sterner, glared for some seconds, then turned to the gangway up into the airship.

For a long time Bert remained clinging to the railing of the gallery. He was almost physically sick with the horror of this trifling incident. He found it far more dreadful than the battle. He was indeed a very degenerate, latter day, civilized person.

Late that afternoon Kurt came into the cabin and found him curled up on his locker and looking very white and miserable. Kurt had also lost something of his pristine freshness.

"Seasick?" he asked.

"No!"

"We ought to reach New York this evening. There's a good breeze coming up under our tails. Then we shall see things."

Bert did not answer.

Kurt opened out folding chair and table and rustled for a time with his maps. Then he fell thinking darkly. He roused himself presently and looked at his companion. "What's the matter?" he said.

Kurt stared [illegible] "What's the matter?"

"I saw them hit that chap. I saw that flying machine man hit the flames of the big ironclad. I saw that dead chap in the passage. I've seen too much smashing and killing lately. That's the matter. I don't like it. I didn't know war was that sort of thing. I'm a [illegible]. I don't like it."

"I don't like it," said Kurt. "By Jove, no!"

"I've read about war and all that, but, when you see it it's different. And I'm getting giddy. I'm getting giddy. I didn't mind a bit being up in that balloon at first; but all this looking down and floating over things and smashing up people is getting on my nerves. See?"

"I'll have to get off again."

Kurt thought: "You're not the only one. The men are still getting strung up. The flying—that's just flying. Naturally it makes one a little swimmy in the head at first. As for the killing, we've got to be blooded, that's all. We're tame, civilized men. And we've got to get blooded."

He turned again to his maps. Bert sat crumpled up in the corner, apparently heedless of him. For some time both kept silence.

"What did the prince want to go and 'ang that chap for?" asked Bert suddenly.

"That was all right," said Kurt; "that was all right, quite right. Here were the orders, plain as the nose on your face, and here was that fool going about with matches"——

"Gaw! I shan't forget that bit in a 'urry," said Bert irrelevantly.

Kurt did not answer him. He was measuring their distance from New York and speculating. "Wonder what the American aeroplanes are like," he said. "Something [illegible] our drachenflieger. We shall know by this time to-morrow. I wonder what we shall know—I wonder. Suppose, after all, they put up a fight. Run a sort of fight."

He whistled softly and mused. Presently he fretted out of the cabin and later Bert found him in the twilight upon the swinging platform, staring ahead and speculating about the things that might happen on the morrow.

Clouds veiled the sea again, and the long, straggling wedge of airships, rising and falling as they flew, seemed like a flock of strange new birds in a chaos that had neither earth nor water, but only mist and sky.

CHAPTER V.

How War Came to New York

THE city of New York was in the year of the German attack the largest, richest, in many respects the most splendid and in some the wickedest city the world has ever seen.

She was the supreme type of the city of the scientific commercial age. She displayed its greatness, its power, its ruthless anarchic enterprise and its social disorganization most strikingly and completely. She had long ousted London from her pride of place as the modern Babylon.

She was the centre of the world's [illegible] the world's trade and the world's pleasure and men likened her to the apocalyptic cities of the ancient prophets.

She sat drinking up the wealth of a continent as Rome once drank the wealth of the Mediterranean, and Babylon the wealth of the East.

In her streets one found the extremes of magnificence and misery, of civilization and disorder. In one quarter [illegible] of marble, laced and crowned with light, and flame and flowers, towered up into her marvellous twilights beautiful beyond description; in another a black and sinister polyglot population sweltered in indescribable congestion in warrens and excavations beyond the power and knowledge of government.

Her vice, her crime, her law alike were inspired by a fierce and terrible energy, and, like the great cities of mediaeval Italy, her ways were dark and adventurous with private war.

The Wonder City

It was the peculiar shape of Manhattan Island, pressed in by arms of the sea on either side and incapable of comfortable expansion, except along a narrow northward belt, that first gave the New York architects their bias for extreme vertical dimensions. Every need was lavishly supplied them—money, material, labor; only space was restricted.

To begin with, therefore, they built high perforce. But to do so was to discover a whole new world of architectural beauty of exquisite ascendant lines, and long after the central congestion had been relieved by tunnels under the sea, four colossal bridges over the East River and a dozen monorail [illegible] east and west, the upward growth went on.

In many ways New York and her gorgeous plutocracy repeated Venice in the magnificence of her architecture, painting, metal work and sculpture—for example, in the grim intensity of her political method in her maritime and commercial ascendancy.

But she repeated no previous state at [illegible] lax disorder of her internal administration, a laxity that made vast sections of her area lawless beyond precedent, so that it was possible for whole districts to be impassable, while civil war raged between street and street, and for Alsatias to exist in her midst in which the official police never set foot.

She was an ethnic whirlpool. The flags of all nations flew in her harbor, and at the climax the yearly coming and going overseas numbered together upward of 2,000,000 human beings.

To Europe she was America; to America she was the gateway of the world.

But to tell the story of New York would be to write a social history of the world. Saints and martyrs, dreamers and scoundrels, the traditions of a thousand races and a thousand religions, went to her making and throbbed and jostled in her streets.

And over all that torrential confusion of men and purposes fluttered that strange flag the Stars and Stripes, that meant at once the noblest thing in life and the vast [illegible]—that is to say, liberty on the one hand, and on the other the base jealousy the individual self-seeker feels toward the common purpose of the State.

The Far-Off Dream of War

For many generations New York had taken no heed of war save as a thing that happened far away, that affected prices and supplied the newspapers with exciting headlines and pictures.

The New Yorkers felt perhaps even more certainly than the English had done that war in their own land was an impossible thing. In that they shared the delusion of all North America.

They felt as secure as spectators at a bull fight, they risked their money perhaps on the result, but that was all. And such ideas of war as the common Americans possessed were derived from the limited picturesque, adventurous war of the past.

They saw war as they saw history, through an iridescent mist, deodorized, scented, indeed, with all its essential cruelties tactfully hidden away. They were inclined to regret it as something ennobling, to sigh that it could no longer come into their own private experience.

They read with interest, if not with avidity, of their new guns, of their immense and still more immense ironclads, of their incredible and still more incredible explosives, but just what these tremendous engines of destruction might mean for their personal lives never entered their heads.

They did not, so far as one can judge from their contemporary literature, think that they meant anything to their personal lives at all. They thought America was safe amid all this piling up of explosives.

They cheered the flag by habit and tradition, they despised other nations, and whenever there was an international difficulty they were intensely patriotic—that is to say, they were ardently against any native politician who did not say, threaten and do harsh and uncompromising things to the antagonist people.

They were spirited to Asia, spirited to Germany, so spirited to Great Britain that the international attitude of the mother country to her great daughter was constantly compared in contemporary caricature to that between a henpecked husband and a vicious young wife.

And, for the rest, they all went about their business and pleasure as if war had died out with the megatherium.

And Then War Came

And then suddenly into a world peacefully busied for the most part upon armaments and the perfection of explosives war came—came the shock of realizing that the guns were going off; that the masses of inflammable material all over the world were at last ablaze.

The immediate effect upon New York of the sudden onset of war was merely to intensify her normal vehemence.

The newspapers and magazines that fed the American mind—for books upon this important continent had become simply material for the energy of collectors—were instantly a coruscation of war pictures and of headlines that rose like rockets and burst like shells.

To the normal high-strung energy of New York streets was added a touch of war fever.

Great crowds assembled, more especially in the dinner hour, in Madison Square about the Farragut monument to listen to and cheer patriotic speeches, and a veritable epidemic of little flags and buttons swept through even these great torrents of swiftly moving young people, who poured into New York of a morning by car and monorail and subway and train to toil and ebb home again between the hours of 5 and 7. It was dangerous not to wear a war button.

The splendid music halls of the time sank every topic in patriotism and evolved scenes of wild enthusiasm. Strong men wept at the sight of the national banner sustained by the whole strength of the ballet, and special searchlights and illuminations amazed the watching angels.

The churches re-echoed the national enthusiasm in graver key and slower measure, and the aerial and naval preparations on the East River were greatly incommoded by the multitude of excursion steamers which thronged, helpfully cheering, about them.

The trade in small arms was enormously stimulated, and many over-wrought citizens found an immediate relief for their emotions in letting off fireworks of a more or less heroic, dangerous and national character in the public streets.

Small children's air balloons of the latest model attached to strings became a serious check to the pedestrian in Central Park.

And amidst scenes of indescribable emotion the Albany Legislature, in permanent session, and with a generous suspension of rules and precedents, passed through both houses the long-disputed bill for universal military service in New York State.

Critics of the American character are disposed to consider that up to the actual impact of the German attack the people of New York dealt altogether too much with the war as if it was a political demonstration.

Little or no damage, they urged, was done to either the German or Japanese forces by the wearing of buttons, the waving of small flags or the songs. They forgot that under the conditions of warfare a century of science had brought about the non-military section of the population could do no serious damage in any form to their enemies and that there was no reason, therefore, why they should not do as they did.

Desperate Desmond

SOON AS WE LAND THIS ARTILLERY, I WILL RE-COVER HER!
I HAVE YOU IN MY POWER, ROSAMOND. I WILL FOIL YOUR LOVER CLAUDE AND THE GUNS YET, EH, PAL GOMGOTZ!
YOU CUR!
WE HAVE SAFELY LANDED AND THE VILLAIN DESMOND CANNOT ESCAPE ME. I WILL SAVE MY ROSAMOND!
PEEP PEEP
WHILE THE SAILORS ARE SCOUTING THE TALL GRASS FOR THE CUR, I WILL LOAD THIS CANNON FOR HIS EXECUTION. KEEP AWAY BIRDIE.
COME OUT LITTLE BIRDIES, THIS IS NO PLACE FOR A NEST. I WOULDN'T KILL YOU FOR THE WORLD. WE ARE TO SHOOT DESMOND!
OUCH! A HORRID SNAKE!
THE BUNK HERO IS POWERLESS GET HIM GOMGOTZ!
I DEFY YOU VILLAIN!
WHIP UP THE HORSES, GOMGOTZ. SOON AS I FIND A LONE SPOT I WILL BLOW YOUR LOVER TO PIECES

Desperate Desmond has escaped from the British fleet, taking Rosamond with him. His faithful henchman, Chief Gomgotz, the Borneo wild man, is going to help the villain frame up some choice form of torture for our fair heroine. But Claude has not yet given up the chase. The sailors from the warships will follow him to the death.

Leaving Claude in charge of the artillery, the sailors go scouting through the jungle to see if they can locate Desmond. In the meantime an innocent little bird spies the cannon and thinks it would be an elegant place for a nest. But, alas! There's a wicked snake close behind the bird. The snake is the villain of the animal kingdom.

Claude is getting the cannon ready for the execution of Desmond when the sailor boys get him—if they do get him. But when our hero sees a bird flying into the muzzle of the gun he feels in duty bound to go to the rescue. All heroes have kind hearts, as you are probably aware, if you are an earnest student of drama.

That being the case, it's up to Claude to get the bird out of the cannon before it is fired. It takes a brave man to walk up to a cannon's mouth and thrust his arm into the muzzle up to the elbow. But, then, Claude's bravery has never been questioned. We have seen him face greater perils than this without turning a hair.

Of course, Claude did not know the snake was in there, but he knows it now, for the reptile has coiled itself around his arm and is getting ready to strike. Doesn't it seem a pity that a man can't do a kind deed without endangering his life? Wonder if that is a venomous serpent. Anyhow, it can't be any worse than Desmond and Gomgotz.

The villain has tied Claude to the muzzle of the gun and is going to blow him to pieces as soon as he gets to some lonely spot where the British Navy can't butt in and spoil the fun. And Rosamond will have to stand by and see her lover killed—at least, that is Desmond's plan. But he may possibly be foiled in to-morrow's pictures.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TOO OLD FOR HER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl twenty-one years of age, and engaged to a young man three years my senior. While I remain single my father allows me $15 a week for my personal use, which allowance is to cease when I marry.

My fiance earns only $25 a week with no other means. My father says that his present small salary would be no objection if he could later raise himself to some influential position, but that he is too easy-going and too often allows stronger-minded men to take advantage of him to ever amount to anything.

I would do anything to please him, and thought I loved him dearly until recently, when I met a gentleman whose character I admire greatly. He is very decided in his opinions and seems to command attention and respect everywhere he goes. He is fifty years old and is quite wealthy.

What I admire mostly about him is his ability to make people look up to him. He did not know I was engaged and told my father he would like to marry me, and father would like me to break my engagement and marry this gentleman.

He argues that a girl, my age, does not know what is best for her, and that the way she marries decides whether her future life is going to be spent with a little enjoyment or whether she will live with just the bare necessaries of life, and never know the pleasures that a comfortable income affords.

I would rather do anything than hurt the feelings of the young man I am engaged to, as he has been very good to me, and I owe many a pleasant time to his efforts in the last year; but as father is much older and wiser than I, probably I ought to heed what he says. W. F.

I CANNOT advise you to marry a man twenty-nine years your senior. His wealth appeals to you, but you will soon settle down into a middleaged woman if you marry a man more than old enough to be your father.

At the same time you had no great love for your fiance, or you would not so easily consider giving him up for a wealthier man.

Your father may be very wise and good, but you should be the one to decide your own future.

The idea of a young girl's marrying a man so much her senior is very revolting to most people.

The House With No Address

A Story of Love and Tragedy, by E. Nesbit. Copyright by Doubleday, Page and Company

"I DRINK to your happiness, madam, if you will allow me," said the chauffeur primly, glass in hand, and drank.

"It is the new head," Uncle Mosenthal went on. "I wish I had thought to bring it from the theatre. We would have crowned it with roses"—he pointed to the sheaf of bouquets that Smith had brought up—"and set it on the table and done honor to it."

"It was not the head. It was Denny's music—wasn't it glorious?" She was glad that the head was not there. She was in no mood for that sort of mumming.

The music was of the finest—he is the child of Tchaikowsky and the grandchild of Beethoven. Why is he not here for me to tell him so?"

"He was tired," said Sandra, in a very tired voice. "He wanted to rest."

"Oh, well, he will have all that is left of his life in which to rest and praised to be. But the head we could have praised to-night—I wish it were here—I see it with the roses. Ah, Uncle Moses is the old man for the romance, eh? And 'The House With No Address' the true home of romance. Is it not so, Smith? You also, like me, love the romance. Good night. Schlafen sie wohl."

"You have luck always," he said, when John Smith had gone. "That man—how did you find him?"

She told.

"You know something about him?"

"We have met before," said Uncle Mosenthal, "not as tonight. But I say nothing. Let him keep his secrets, and he will let us keep ours."

As Sandra unwound her wraps she became aware of an impression of having seen—and not at the time noticed—that while Mr. Mosenthal had been speaking the chauffeur had been trying to attract her attention and to direct it, when he should have attracted it, to the further room, where the parcels were that he had carried up from the brougham.

Sandra Seeks a Letter.

Of course, there had been a letter from Him, and Denny had put it in the brougham with the other things. But why hadn't he told her so? Perhaps he had meant to tell her when they got in, and had not liked to speak of it before Mr. Mosenthal.

"I'll change my dress," she said gaily. "I won't be a minute, uncle."

She passed into the next room, and turned up the light and gathered all the letters from the table

Among the parcels, in brown paper and pink paper and white paper—parcels tied with blue ribbon, and silver string, and common twine—was a large bundle in a black cloth.

She touched it curiously. Lifted a corner.

It was the Head.

Denny must have sent it home—it was broken perhaps—injured in some way. She was not going to have Uncle Moses find it. She did not want the thick-skinned jests of his Teutonic romanticism.

She gathered the head up with the letters and ran up to her room, full-scented with the roses she had hidden there, laid all that she carried on her white pillow, changed her dress to a white and gold kimono, and went down to Uncle Mosenthal and the champagne and the lights and the supper and the loving flattery and the thoughts of her triumph.

Edmund's letter lay among the other letters upstairs, the letter that would explain everything—make everything right.

The letter could lie there, waiting for her, and the knowledge that it was there would sweeten, while it lengthened, the hour that she must spend with the old millionaire, pleased as a child with her success, glad as a father in her joy.

It was a good hour, after all. She told him all about the pneumonia and her new freedom, and he was kind and quiet and gentle, and when he left her, to catch the midnight train for Calais, he blessed her as a father might have done.

The moment he was gone she turned out the electric lights and ran up to her room, extinguishing lights as she went.

Arrived in the thick rose-scent of her room, she lighted the wax candles which sheltered her dreams, and turned to the bed for her letter.

The head lay there, as she had laid it—oh, no—not just as she had laid it, for it had slipped from her pillow and rolled down on the quilt and lay there among the letters.

She lifted it to hide it away—the sight of it gave her an uncomfortable little shock. It was not a nice thing to have in one's bedding. She would take it downstairs.

The Head and Tragedy

As she touched it she touched also something else—something wet and sticky.

There was something on the Head—how horrid—some of the paint must have run—or the new composition had melted.

It was all over the letters, too, and the white quilt.

She dropped the Head, and went to the dressing table, where the candles burned in their silver candlesticks.

The stuff on her hands was red. Almost as if * * *

The thought was intolerable. She could not bear it an instant. With the courage of terror she sprang to the bed, lifted the Head again and carried it to the dressing table, where the candles were.

She stood there a very long time, quite without moving.

It was not possible to move. For it was not paint that had run.

And the head she held was of no new composition, but of the old composition—as old as Adam.

And the stains on her hands were of blood—and the Head that she held in her hands was the head of a dead man.

CHAPTER XIV.
The Death-Night

WHAT would you do, dear reader, if at midnight and alone, in a house with no address, you found yourself before your toilet table, with its neat, familiar furniture of cut glass and silver, and in your hands the head of a dead man?

You might scream and go mad, and be found in the morning a harmless lunatic fondling the dead thing in heaven knows what merciful delusion. Such things have been! There is a story of a dead hand, but it is not this story.

Or you might drop the head and run screaming out of the house and tell the first policeman you met your incredible tale.

Or you might just conceivably, if you were very strong indeed, be strong enough to hold on to your sanity and your self-control. But I venture to affirm that not one in a hundred women could achieve this.

Sandra did. But then she was the chief among ten thousand, strong, self-reliant, brave. All her life's training had been a training in self-reliance, in strength, in courage.

In the old days of the New Forest Denny and the old nurse had depended on her for all the things that make life endurable. It was she who schemed and planned to secure happiness and a measure of freedom for all three. Uncle Moses had seemed to manage every detail of the life they had led in London.

It was he who had given her the romantic entourage of The House With No Address—had launched her, and wrought on the robe of her fame the embroidery of mystery that should enhance and adorn it.

But under and through all this her own desire and intention stood firm as a rock. She had made up her mind that night at the Mount, when her grandfather lay dead, and she stood looking down on his quiet face for a long hour, examining her conscience, questioning her memory, and at last deciding that to his memory she owed nothing.

It was on that night that she had decided what to do. She would go to London and make a home for herself and her old nurse—give Denny a chance to give to the world the music that was in him. She would dance to thousands, and be a stranger to them all. She would fence herself round with a wall impassable. She would "keep herself to herself," and no one should have more of her than the sight of her dancing.

She had planned her white-haired disguise before she met Uncle Moses, and found in him that vein of romance which rhymed so well with hers. He had done for her what she had determined to do for herself—and if he had not done it, she would have done. There was a vein of hardness in her, running beside the vein of romance—as there is in all those who make their dreams come true.

She stood there, with a dead man's head in her hands, perfectly motionless, perfectly silent.

A man who has fallen from a cliff and is caught by some kindly stone or bush projecting from the cliff face feels at first nothing but the whirling sense that all is lost, and that he is but delayed an instant on the headlong way to death.

But before he can feel this more superficially he realizes that, if all his thought, all his strength, all his wit and will are raised to their highest power, he may yet live.

At first the thought, the strength, the wit and the will concentrate on one thing—not to move—not to precipitate the disaster. Help may come.

But when, presently, he has drawn breath, and feels that his support is firm, he will, since no help comes, dare to shift his position a little—raise a hand a thousandth part of an inch at a time—to feel, very slowly, very cautiously, for some hold for that hand.

He grasps a piece of the rock, tries it, finds it firm and trustworthy.

Then with his foot he reaches out for some support, finds it, ventures to open his eyes, to consider whether, and, how, he may change those supports for others—finds a way growing clearer—difficult, dangerous, but still a way, up the cliff face, and so, straining to its utmost every power of mind and body, he slowly, slowly, slowly climbs up, and at last throws himself, half insensible indeed, but alive, on the smooth safe turf, where the scent of the wild thyme is, and the skylarks sing—and there is a footpath by which living men go home across the fields.

So Sandra.

The First Thought

The first thought was—"The wax head has changed to this: I knew it was a horrible thing to do that dance—and the wax head has changed to this—that means I am mad. It is not really the head of a dead man. It only seems so to me."

But quite soon she knew that what she held had never been wax. And when she knew this—certainly knew what it was that she held in her hand—her thought was:

"It is all over. Now I shall go mad."

The next: "If I can hold out another moment against this horror that is closing round me, something may happen, some help may come. I may not go mad. It is horrible to go mad. Hold on to your senses, Sandra—hold on, hold on."

Then the certainty that no help would come—that she was alone—and that if she were saved she must be her own saviour.

And, growing, growing, the knowledge that if she could only move her mind—give it some support to cling to—it might yet be saved from the abyss over which it hung, as by a thread.

Her mind reached out for something to hold on to. Red roses? No. Someone had made a horrible joke about roses—a long time ago. Something else—something else.

And all the time the horror was tightening boa-constrictor folds around her mind—in a pressure more and more difficult to resist.

And all the while she held the head and gazed at it—immobile as itself. That was when she felt if she moved it would be to give the signal for the sluice gates to be raised and the flood of madness let loose to overflow her soul.

"Hold on," she said, "hold on."

Slowly her intelligence reached out, caught at the silver brushes. By thinking very hard of silver brushes—yes, they were sold in shops, where crowds of people went in and out, and the sun shone in at the door. Yes, and there were other shops—Hamley's, with the masks.

They were not real faces. No—that support would not bear yet. The world was full of people; full of people all kind and friendly. No one could have done such a thing as this. (Yes—keep on thinking, think hard—it's your only chance.)

"I isn't a real head," she said aloud—and got her eyes away from it.

She was almost at the top of the cliff now. She had got her eyes away from the head—but the room was horrible to her—more horrible now than the head itself.

"Hold on," she said, "hold on—you'll do it yet."

She did not lay the head down while she fetched something to cover it. She knew well enough that she could never have gone back to it.

She carried it to the washstand and dropped the towels round it.

Every nerve crisped, she walked slowly—it was so necessary not to hurry, or one would run, and if one ran, one would never stop—one would run round and round forever—up one staircase and down the other, till one dropped dead.

And then heads and heads and heads would come crowding out of the darkness and look at one as one lay.

"If I could get downstairs," she told herself, "and turn on all the lights."

She moved with the exaggerated caution of a man who knows that he is very drunk and is determined not to act otherwise than as sober men act.

She had the bundle of towels in her arms.

"Now," she told herself, "open the door—quite slowly—go down the stairs and turn on the lights as you go. There is no one in the house—nothing can leap out at you or come up behind, and—no, don't think of that—go right on—that's right—light all the lights. You can leave them burning when you go to bed. That's it—only one more flight. Steady. Here's the sitting room. You're doing it—you're doing it. You're not beaten."

She got into the room, shutting the door behind her, to be sure. Quite steadily and quickly she went to the Buhl cabinet, opened it, and put the head in its wrappings on the red velvet-covered shelf, shut the door quickly—it was the first quick movement she had permitted herself—turned the ornate brass key, and drew a long breath, holding the key in her hands.

Then she turned to the door—to go upstairs again to her room to lock herself in, to be safe away from that.

But . . . it was unthinkable—this room where the head was became in that instant a place of refuge from that room upstairs where it had been, where the blood lay on the letters and on her quilt, and the red roses smelt so strong and sweet and sickly.

With an instinct of fortifying what had suddenly become a sanctuary from her terror, she locked the door.

She wished there had been a door between this and the next rooms.

It was not nice to think that behind that curtain was darkness, the same darkness that was in the room upstairs.

She made herself draw back the curtain—its rings were noisy and set her heart beating again—turned on all the lights in the dining-room—and, further, in the mirrored room, where someone that she used to be had danced that afternoon.

As the light awoke, her own white shape leaped at her from the mirrors like a crowd of ghosts.

She got back to the room where the head was, and again it seemed to her less horrible than other place in the house.

So far, the head had been to her only the head of a dead man. Now, like a cold hand on her heart, came the question: Whose? She had felt that it was dead—she had seen that it was dead—but the long hair had fallen over its face and she had not seen the features.

Constricting her heart came the thought that had come to her while she danced that night—with that thing in her hands, that thing which was perhaps looking at her through the unwrapping towels—through the inlaid brass and tortoiseshell of the cabinet door.

Dead men could see through doors perhaps.

The thought, the ghastly thought, clamored for recognition.

She held her breath a moment—clenched her hands, and let it come.

If that head should be her lover's? Disguised with flowing hair. The work of some madman—mad with desire and jealousy.

Such things had happened.

Jealousy did make men murderers.

She had read such things.

Some of her letters had breathed hints of such things. And there had been vague threats.

That man—but he was dead—and pneumonia keeps you out of mischief for a little while before you die. She had not really seen the face.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Love and Patience

DR. RUSSELL H. CONWELL is a great believer in patience, and he recently told a story indicating what he believed to be an example of making a virtue of patience.

A young man was standing at the gate, waiting for his sweetheart, and when at last she appeared he remarked kindly:

"What a time you have kept me waiting."

"Oh, dear me, how fussy you are," she observed. "Why, I didn't promise to meet you until a quarter of eight, and it's only two minutes after eight now."

"Ah, Maggie, dear," replied the young man, "but you have made a slight mistake in the day. You were to have been here at a quarter of eight last evening. I have been waiting ever since."

To Clean Hairbrushes.

Hairbrushes need to be washed frequently because of the perspiration of the head, which readily retains the dust. The best brushes may be ruined by careless washing and if the bristles are allowed to become soft a hairbrush becomes practically useless. To keep your hairbrushes in good condition proceed in the following manner: Have two basins of water—cold, not hot, as is sometimes advised. To the first, which contains a quart of water, add a dessertspoonful of ammonia. Now take the brushes and keep dipping the bristles up and down in the water, being careful not to wet the backs, and in a minute or two the dirt will come out as if by magic. Now dip up and down in clear water to rinse, and dry them near—but not too near—a stove. No soap is needed, and no rubbing with the hands.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

MO. PACIFIC UP AND DOWN

NEW YORK, April 20.—Devoid of a semblance of activity, the market to-day was exceedingly dull, with the majority of stocks quoting fractional declines under the closing of yesterday. Most of the attention of the traders was attracted to Missouri Pacific, which started with a gain of ⅜. Reports that James Speyer of Speyer & Company and Frank Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, were to be elected directors of the road gave considerable strength to that stock, which began with a gain of ⅜. The stock failed to hold its lead and at the end of the first half hour had fallen back to 48½ or ½ under its closing.

Union Pacific was also ⅝ lower, while Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading and St. Paul were down fractionally. National Railway of Mexico second preferred was one of the strong factors, moving up ¾ to ⅛. Wisconsin Central was another strong factor, advancing one point to 48.

The buying by outsiders that prevailed at yesterday's close was absent to-day, and the belief was that there would be little buying until the decisions in the oil and tobacco cases are handed down.

Copper Smelting and Nevada Utah were slightly lower.

Steel common ruled extremely dull and about ⅛ lower.

Dullness prevailed on the Curb, prices of most stocks being practically unchanged.

Americans were heavy in London, a few of the more important issues showing small gains.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

There has been no doubt of the existence of an extensive short interest, some of it having been outstanding for months. This interest, however, is owned by very strong and very bold operators, and yesterday's upward movement is not sufficient to cause them any serious alarm.

$ $ $

An influence which has caused some short covering is the election to the Equitable Trust Company board of Henry E. Cooper, representing John D. Rockefeller, together with discovery that both Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Gould had purchased substantial blocks of Equitable Trust Company stock.

$ $ $

It is to the benefit of the bankers that bond offerings are not made immediately, because conditions in the general bond market are improving rapidly, and in a week or two the bonds may command a better price. Equipment trust certificates are enjoying the best market they have had for several months, and dealers report that they are unable to supply the demand. Inquiry is heaviest for short maturities, that is, from 1912 to 1915.

$ $ $

High grade certificates of short maturity like those of the New York Central & Ohio and Norfolk & Western have been cleaned up in the market, and it is very difficult to find them. Second grade issues, such as those of the Erie, St. Louis & San Francisco, St. Louis Southwestern, Seaboard Air Line, Missouri Pacific and Wabash, are also in good demand, with no prospect of a letup in the buying movement.

$ $ $

Bond dealers are looking with disfavor upon the "fever" raging in the short term note market. Investment buying in this direction has been so heavy that the high grade issues are selling at fancy prices, and investors, merchants and manufacturers who have hesitated to make purchases are now throwing discretion to the winds and buying second class notes, which are likely to depreciate rapidly in price if trade continues depressed. Bond dealers point out that in times of depression second class notes are always among the first to show weakness. They cite the Southern Railway notes, which in the panic of 1907 declined to about 75. It is true that eventually the notes were taken up, but many investors sold, being influenced by the depreciation in price.

$ $ $

Another steel dinner will be held at the Waldorf on May 4, or 5, at which Judge Gary will preside and the affairs of the steel world will be discussed in a social manner. Railroad officials still insist that there is no intention of increasing their orders for material in the immediate future and indeed not until the Supreme Court hands down its decisions in the Oil and Tobacco cases. These statements are made with the expectation that the Supreme Court will act on these cases before it adjourns for the Summer; otherwise the railroads will be compelled to make purchases, because the farmers are producing a bumper crop and the railroads are not in condition to handle it properly.

$ $ $

The Senate of New York State is giving favorable consideration to a bill prohibiting short sales of stocks and bonds for speculation on margin. France tried to prohibit short sales once, but abandoned the attempt because it was discovered that it is impossible to upset the natural laws of trade by any legislative act. Every American citizen has a constitutional right to buy and sell anything he pleases and to do it with cash or credit, and if the Legislature really enacts this remarkable law the Supreme Court of the United States will declare its unconstitutional.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 111

Couldn't Sell Before Advertising, But Did After.

One of the best lines of high-grade shoes was started by a young man some years ago who traveled for his father. Today those shoes are sold all over the world simply by the publicity that the young man has given them.

It happened on one occasion he was in a town of the Middle West. He had been unsuccessful in getting a dealer to stock his shoes. The shoes were not sold through a chain of his own stores but through the dealers.

He went into a dealer's the next morning.

"Why can't I sell you my shoes? They are better than those you are selling," he said.

The dealer replied: "Perhaps they are, but everybody in this town knows this other make of shoes and they are the most popular shoes in this section and that is why I can sell them. I cannot sell those of yours, which are not known. Go out and create a market for your goods and make the goods known and then I will stock them," said the dealer.

The young man went back to his hotel and thought the proposition over. He concluded that he would have to make his goods known. He went back East and started an advertising campaign, which gradually spread all over the country.

The next trip that he made West he found it was far easier to sell his goods, because the shoes were known, and little by little he got them into the stores all over the country because of the force of his persistent effective newspaper advertising.

Had he not advertised he might have sold some goods, but he never would have sold his goods to the extent that he did had he not gone into all centres and talked about his goods.

The Boston American gives a man an opportunity to talk in Greater Boston and New England in a way that he could talk through no other medium. Think of the good will it will create for your business if you will advertise. Think of the good will it will make for your trade mark if you advertise.

If you want to know more about the power of the almost 400,000 circulation of the Boston American, address Trade Aid Department, Boston American.

GEN. ELECTRIC REPORT IS OUT

The General Electric Company, which is managed and owned mostly by New England people, although its main factory is in Schenectady, N. Y., is very unassuming in its accounting. This company, with its $65,179,600 of capital stock and $14,962,000 of 3½ and 5 per cent. gold coupon debenture bonds, reports profits of $10,855,692 for the twelve months ended December 31, 1910. From this must be deducted $5,214,368 paid in dividends, leaving a surplus of $5,641,324 for the year.

When it comes to the company's balance sheet the patents, franchises and good will are given valuation of just one dollar. Again the furniture and fixtures, other than in the factories, are valued at just the same amount, one dollar. This is surely modest and less pretentious corporations frequently reckon patents, franchises and good will in the millions. Although the patents, etc., are given a nominal valuation of one dollar, the company spent $564,697 last year in acquiring sundry patents, for cost of applications and licenses under patents and in patent litigation and miscellaneous expenses, all of which was charged off.

This big corporation reports total earnings during 1910 of $74,707,689 and total expenses of $63,134,602. This latter includes $4,601,175 for depreciation of plants. It has works at Schenectady, N. Y., Lynn and Pittsfield, Harrison, N. J., and other places for manufacturing electric machinery and supplies.

The sales billed and orders received last year were the largest in the company's history, while the largest previous year was in 1907. The company has 32,000 employes and uses approximately 8,530,000 square feet of floor space, while the total land area is about 608 acres. The company plans for extensions at East Boston and Lynn this year.

Among the assets in the balance sheet appears an item of $2,805,076 as copper mining investments.

HARVARD STUDENT WEDS IN NEW YORK

Friends of Joseph D. Auchincloss in the Harvard Law School are preparing to welcome the young New York man and his bride when they return to Boston after their honeymoon, to remain here until Mr. Auchincloss completes his studies.

In New York yesterday he was married to Miss Priscilla D. Stanton, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lee Stanton in West Forty-ninth street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Henry S. Coffin. Only a few relatives and friends were present owing to mourning in the family.

The marriage unites two families prominent in the railroad world, the father of the bridegroom being a director of the Illinois Central and other roads, while Louis Lee Stanton is on the board of the Erie and of other lines.

GET NO THANKS FOR SAVING MEN FROM SEA

E. J. Rogers and William Couts of Quincy are the heroes in that city to-day, and being congratulated for the rescue under trying conditions of two men from drowning off Peddocks Island point. Rogers and Couts were in their dory anchored off the point, fishing. They had not noticed another row boat that had drifted to within 100 yards of them. Suddenly they heard cries for help and saw two men struggling in the water. They turned their boat and rowing against the wind and choppy sea reached the struggling men before they were washed from their overturned craft. Rogers and Couts lifted the men into their dory and set them ashore at Hough's Neck. The rescued men refused to give their names and went away without thanking their rescuers.

WINTHROP YOUTH HURT BY RUNAWAY

Charles Gunderson, eighteen, was painfully injured while attempting to stop a runaway from crashing into a crowd of persons who were watching a cross-country race in Columbia square, Winthrop. The horse, hitched to a light wagon, was making directly for the crowd when Gunderson seized the bridle. He was dragged several feet and finally released his hold, falling under the horse's hoofs. Both hind hoofs landed on the young man's chest and the wheels of the wagon passed over his legs. He was taken to the Metcalf Hospital, where it was found that he had been badly cut and bruised. His injuries were not serious and he was later sent home.

JEWISH PASSOVER ENDS AT SUNSET

The Jewish holiday, Passover, closes at sunset to-day. In all of the orthodox homes bread will again take the place of the unleavened cakes.

During the festival services were conducted at the various institutions. Rabbi M. M. Eichler and Cantor E. Wolkowitz conducted the services at the State prison, Charlestown. Cantor M. Hilman and the Rev. L. A. Alexander officiated at the House of Correction on Deer Island; I. Robinson conducted the services at the Massachusetts Reformatory at Concord.

SPEYER & CO. NEW M. P. BANKERS

NEW YORK, April 20.—James Speyer will enter the Missouri Pacific board, and the firm of Speyer & Company will replace Kuhn, Loeb & Company as bankers for the Gould railroad system. Mr. Speyer takes the place of Paul M. Warburg, who resigned on Tuesday, and Henry I. Miller that of Cornelius Vanderbilt, who resigned with Mr. Warburg as a protest against the selection of B. F. Bush as president.

TO ENTERTAIN DE MAR AT ARENA TO-NIGHT

Clarence E. De Mar of the North Dorchester A. A., winner of the B. A. A. Marathon race, will be at the Boston Arena to-night as a guest of the management. Manager John Graham of the Arena has also extended invitations to Governor Foss and staff and Mayor Fitzgerald to be special guests at the reception to the holder of the world's record for Boston's classic race.

Organized Privilege Is Making Its Last Stand Against the Jury Trial Bill—It Is Up to the Governor

The passing by both houses of the Hoar bill, which seeks to confirm the constitutional guarantee of a trial by jury to men in this Commonwealth who are charged with crime, is the first act of the law-making power to HALT THE ENCROACHMENTS OF THE COURTS, not only upon the constitutional rights of the citizens, but upon the rights of the Legislature itself.

Certain lawyers, whose wealthy clients have lent distinction to their professional repute, attacked this bill in circulars addressed to the members of the Legislature. The weakness of their reasons for opposition to this bill is one of the best arguments in its favor. They were not too fair to make the terrible disaster to several hundred working girls of New York a false illustration of the disadvantages which this bill would work in the enforcement of the law to protect the occupants of buildings from the danger of fire. But it is for the PROTECTION of the workingmen and women from unjust and arbitrary judges that this law became necessary, and it no more deprives any citizen of the due protection of the law than the doing of justice to one citizen is depriving another citizen of his proper rights.

The usurped power of the court, which this bill is designed to curb, had for its object the destruction of the right of a trial by jury guaranteed by all the constitutions of our federal union and passed down to us from the most ancient times in England. This power ASSUMED by the courts does not protect property when the police cannot protect it, and its existence might some day lead to a GREAT CATASTROPHE. Never was one of these injunctions yet issued, with the threat that the judge who issued it would decide the facts and fix the punishment on complaint that the injunction had been violated, that the workmen did not receive this judicial riot act with sullen resentment. They know when they have received a square deal.

Organized labor in this country is AS INTELLIGENT as any other class in the community. They know that the extension of the equity powers of the courts is an innovation upon our laws. They know that the early development of this strange doctrine that the courts could exercise the functions of both the Legislature and the jury was for the BENEFIT OF THE RAILROADS in the great struggles which they were having with their employes. They know that the then Attorney-General of the United States, Mr. Richard Olney, had been a railroad lawyer and is a railroad lawyer to-day, and they know the part that he played in this aggression by the courts upon the rights of the citizen.

With this knowledge in their minds and resentment in their hearts, there might come a crisis when a foolish judge, exercising this unwise authority under circumstances of peculiar aggravation, WOULD SET A FIRE THAT NOT ALL THE INJUNCTIONS OF ALL THE COURTS, HIGH AND LOW, COULD RESTRAIN.

When convenience in the administration of justice is the only argument which can be made against the restoration of the courts to their old and respected authority, it can have little weight against the demand of a great class in the community for their ancient rights and against the necessity of all classes for that security which can only come when the right of all is respected.

The House and Senate, having heard the arguments, by an overwhelming vote have sent the bill to the Governor. Organized privilege is now making its LAST STAND before the Chief Executive. These gentlemen ought to read the Governor's inaugural message.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SPECIAL PRIVILEGES

Editor AMERICAN:

Your recent excellent editorial headed: "Is Tax-Dodging a Respectable Crime?" calls attention to a very important matter, for every tax-dodger simply shifts his burden on to other people's shoulders and thus virtually "robs" them. But there is an additional feature of this "crime," to which all should awaken.

When an organization (or number of them) pose, as an example and promoter of morality, and yet, after receiving fire, police and legal protection generally from the government, returns no tax money equivalent whatever therefor, this seems even worse than undervaluation and other forms of evasion, especially because of the evader's false pretensions to morality.

Many churches have, for years, paid no taxes whatever, though receiving all the government protection that individuals and other organizations receive, even to the extent of special privileges which exact justice forbids. Has not this phase of tax exemption helped to make of tax-dodging a "respectable" crime, and ought it not also be stopped?

Is it not as wrong to purchase exemption from justice through influence, numbers or prejudice as through money? Yours for "equal rights to all, special privileges to none," regardless of race, sex or creed,

D. WEBSTER GROH.

Hagerstown, Md.

PROTECTION FOR LINEMEN

Editor AMERICAN:

I have read a great many times in your valued paper articles relating to safety devices for the protection of our mechanics and shop help. Your paper has accomplished a great deal of good for and toward the comfort and safety of the working men and women, especially those of Massachusetts. Why not go a step further and help the linemen? This is a trade that is considered by the insurance companies one of the deadliest in existence and they are right.

Owing to the neglect (?) of the big electric light companies in and near Boston to provide proper places for their wires to run, and instead of placing poles where needed, filling every available inch of space they possibly can, and consequently bringing their wires as near as four inches in places to telephone wires and cables, a lineman has a poor chance.

Make them raise their wires or bury them in the ground (where they should be), and there will be fewer orphans and widows in Massachusetts.

Where are the wire inspectors that they allow such things to exist?

Why do they sit back in their offices and let linemen be sacrificed by the light companies? Why are they not "on the job", to put a stop to the meanest kind of evil—killing men for the sake of paying dividends?

Thousands of dollars for the stockholders, but not one cent to protect the men who do the work!

A TELEPHONE LINEMAN.

NEED A MUNICIPAL HALL

Editor AMERICAN:

There is great need in Boston of a free municipal hall, which is as much desired by many citizens as public pleasure parks. There is great need of a public hall where questions of public affairs can be intelligently discussed.

There has been some active interest manifested in allowing the schools to be used for municipal centres, and it is a wise suggestion. We need a place where people can meet and hear leading speakers on the vital questions of the day.

Ford Hall being owned by a certain sectarian cult is not well adapted for such discussions, as we wish to be under obligations to no religious body and thereby be restrained as to methods and utterances. Another year the Ford Hall meetings will probably be discontinued, and then there should be a concerted movement to establish them in some place untrammeled by any opposing influences.

MRS. CAIRIE G. BARR.

Boston.

BRUTALITY AND THE ZOO

Editor AMERICAN:

Several of us were very glad to see a sensible, well-written letter in your columns from an AMERICAN reader, combatting that horrible idea of a zoo within Boston boundaries. Are we to begin to teach cruelty to animals? Have we no unfortunate children upon whom that money could be better expended to save them from suffering and crime? Always supposing that Boston has money that it knows not what to do with at present.

If we need animals for study buy up a great park and turn loose the wretched creatures pent up in crowded animal stores. Send your children among them then with their teachers and parents to learn how to treat kindly and care for their dumb friends, and we will be on the way to crushing out crime and brutality. There is the root of kindness. But in the name of humanity and common decency let the wild animals stay in their native wilderness.

It's time I hooked th' mewls, t' plow thet parster by th' ditch!

Some years th' bluebird's fust on hand, t' flutter 'n' t' sing—
Some years our lilock's fust t' bust in bud, th' noos t' break—
Some years my Sal's Spring-cleanin' brum is fust t' git in swing;
But this year—all th'ee come 't wunst!—It's SPRING, 'n' no mistake.

As It May Be

By IRWIN THOMAS

"YOUNG woman, I say young to you," said the Court, "but in saying it I wish it distinctly understood that I know better. What, if any, excuse can you offer for this crime?" and the Court looked over her spectacles at the perhaps overly-dressed woman that stood before her.

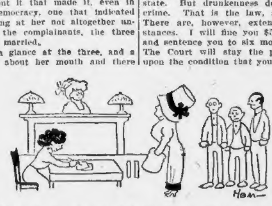
The prisoner was well built—inclined to the stoutness that comes with years. Her refined face showed some trace of dissipation, but there was a bit of the patrician about it that made it, even in this great democracy, one that indicated class. Looking at her not altogether unkindly were the complainants, the three men she had married.

She gave a glance at the three, and a smile played about her mouth and there was a twinkle in her eye that she tried to conceal, but scarce succeeded. Then in answer to the Court she replied:

"I am willing to plead guilty, Your Honoress. You are a woman yourself, I won't lie about it. My first husband there I haven't seen for seven years. I thought he was dead. When he left me I made a cash settlement with him. I tried to find him before I married again and couldn't. My attorney told me to go on and marry.

"As to this last marriage, the one that caused the arrest. That was the result of a wine party. I had separated from my second husband and he had gone home to his father. We were out drinking, and some one bet a basket of wine I would not marry the little red-haired chap, and I did. That's what they say. I have no recollection of marrying him, but he has the certificate."

"I believe what you tell me," said the Court. "I have received many letters from some of our best women in regard to your case. I believe as to your second marriage that you had every reason to think your first husband dead, as he had changed his name and was known by his unmarried cognomen.' As to the last marriage the facts the Court has learned were as you state. But drunkenness does not excuse crime. That is the law, and wisely so. There are, however, extenuating circumstances. I will fine you $500 for bigamy and sentence you to six months in prison. The Court will stay the prison sentence upon the condition that you cease to drink and do not repeat the offence."



Dashing Kate Drummond, whose mother had amassed a fortune selling chewing tobacco to sailor women and others, drew out a roll of bills and paid the fine.

It was less than a week when the court was startled to read that, after having successfully aranged matters with husbands one, two and three, the young woman had eloped with her private secretary, who, until he entered her employ, had been one of the mainstays of the Y. M. C. A. The accounts told how the mother of the young man, a cattlewoman of the West, was on the warpath and threatening to kill the millionairess. But with the young man Kate Drummond had fled and was then on her way to Europe.

The opening of the Glover will fight, and the sending of commissioners to Nova Scotia to take the deposition of Hattie Le Blanc, has reawakened public interest in the most mysterious of Massachusetts murders.

New England's most interesting woman, widow of the Waltham laundryman, who was slain in his own office at night, has consented to tell her story in the columns of the AMERICAN. We have seen the story. It has never been told before. In all our experience we have seen nothing like it.

The trial and acquittal of the Le Blanc girl, now back in her home town of West Arichat, increased the number of Mrs. Glover's friends and sympathizers. It also served to double the number of her enemies and detractors.

Mrs. Glover feels that the time has come to tell all. "I must speak!" she says.

She will describe in the Sunday AMERICAN her girlhood in the Provinces, her arrival in Boston, her career as working girl and business woman, her first meeting with Clarence F. Glover, their courtship, marriage and success as partners. The narrative is thrilling from beginning to end.

This story of Lilliam Marie Glover, prepared by herself, will appear exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN. The first instalment will be found in the AMERICAN of next Sunday.

Whatever your personal opinion of this woman, you will want to read her own story. You ought to hear it from her own lips. You can get it nowhere except in the Sunday AMERICAN. Be on the safe side and speak to-day to your newsdealer.
